John Lewis 'at home' in town despite rumours of discontent

By Ed Hill
ed.hill@archant.co.uk

RUMOURS retail giant John Lewis was set to pull out of the town – a little over a year since opening – have been vehemently denied by the company.

It has been left fuming after a website said the retailer was on the verge of pulling the plug on its 'At Home' store as a result of a growing frustration over traffic problems within North Farm.

But the store said the speculation was "totally untrue" and the comments have subsequently been removed from the offending site.

A spokesperson for John Lewis said: "We are fully committed to the store, which has traded well since opening 14 months ago. Our decision to open on the Longfield Road was informed by extensive research and we were aware of the congestion issues in the area.

"Longfield Road is a very popular shopping destination and we are confident our store will continue to be well received by customers due to its strength, range and value of products."

The branch opened in November 2010, with John Lewis taking out a 20-year lease on the building.

It has invested £8 million in the store and created 190 jobs.

However, its popularity has been a double-edged sword.

It opened its doors just a month after Marks & Spencer opened its flagship store at the retail park. As a result the level of traffic increased on the already busy estate and it has now become the town's biggest traffic trouble spot.

And there's little sign of anything improving fast – especially with the opening this week of the new Asda supermarket – further adding to the

Pair on 1,000km cycle trek across Uganda in order to raise £50,000 funds for village school

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

IMOGEN Cust jetted out of the UK this week to take part in the challenge of a lifetime – a 1,000km cycle ride across Uganda in order to raise £50,000.

The money will go towards building a school in the Ugandan town of Masindi and comes after a year of fundraising events to raise awareness of the event and to help swell the coffers.

Ms Cust, 35, will be joining in the remarkable feat by friend Lyn Long from Leigh-on-Sea.

They flew out to Africa on Thursday, with the trek expected to last three weeks.

With them they are carrying the first brick that will go towards building the Kooki School.

Along the way, the pair will climb to a height of 2,500 metres, over mountains higher than Ben Nevis and Snowdon put together, and travel further than the straight line distance between Land End and John O'Groats – all in 80 per cent humidity.

The £50,000 raised will build and fund the school for two years, changing the lives of more than 400 children.

The two friends are funding the trip themselves, so every penny raised will go towards building and running the school.

Ms Cust said: "I know it's going to be a massive challenge, but it will all be worth it when we get to Masindi and meet the children we're doing this for.

"The support we've had from people has been amazing and we're so grateful to everyone who has helped us get this far".

Incredibly, the pair have already raised more than £19,500 towards their goal with a host of events over the last year, which have included face painting, curry and quiz evenings at the Junahki restaurant in Southborough and a wine-tasting events at Woods on the Pantiles.

Last year, Tunbridge Wells Borough Council carried out a survey of the traffic in the area and in December announced some short-term measures that it hopes will ease the problems. They included having clearer road signs, increased CCTV monitoring and removing a pedestrian crossing.

Meanwhile, the town is now facing the prospect of a fight for customers as Asda arrives, Morrisons returns to Vale Road, and the Tesco at Pembury starts a major overhaul to increase its offering.

HISTORY

Town's copy of Magna Carta has 'Fort Knox' level security

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

IT MAY not be widely known, but Faversham has one of the most important historical documents linked to this country's democracy ever produced.

The town was granted a copy of the Magna Carta given to it in 1300 by the then-king Edward I.

The charter was written by medieval scribes specifically for the town. At the foot of the document it says in Latin that it is for the Barons of the Port of Faversham.

It is an official Royal copy of the document that the barons of England forced King John to sign in 1215 at Runnymede, sealed with King Edward's official wax seal. It is thought that only 17 original medieval copies are left in the world.

The charter established the right of Englishmen to be punished only under the feudal law of the time and not just at the whim of the King.

It sets out the principles of freedom under law and is the basis for legal and political systems around the world.

Recently town chiefs discussed how the document should be best looked after.

Security around the charter was upgraded after a copy of a similar document sold for $20 million in America in 2007.

Susan Brockman, Faversham's town clerk, said: "Our security is really now at Fort Knox level, we really wanted to keep it in the town."

"It is impossible to put a value on it. It's just a really lucky that we have something like this in Faversham."

The town was issued the Magna Carta because of its connection with the Cinque Ports of Kent and Sussex which were given special status because of the role in protecting the country's coast from invasion.

Its historical importance was initially overlooked in the town's archive; not surprisingly as Faversham has one of the largest collections of municipal charters in the UK. Its first charter dates back to 1252, when Henry III gave local barons immunity from the payment of certain tolls and customs.

The charters were often used as a way of raising money or military equipment for the King.

Another one issued by Edward I in 1278, demanded that the barons of Faversham provide him with 57 ships for 15 days of the year.

The last charter dates back to 1685, and recognises the establishment of the town's Queen Elizabeth Grammar School which is still educating children today.

The 700-year-old document is now safely kept in a fire-proof cabinet with other documents and increased insurance.

Ms Brockman said: "In truth the document really has no real value at all because we would

SAFE AND SOUND:

There are only 17 original medieval copies of the Magna Carta left in the world. One copy was sold in the US in 2007, for $20 million never sell it and we would not be able to get permission to sell it in America, as happened in 2007."

Laurence Young, from the Faversham Enterprise Partnership, said: "The charter is owned by town council and they are doing the right thing in insuring the security around Faversham's charters is as good as it can be."

"They are also doing the right thing in exploring the ways in which the charters may be displayed and used in the future as they have a lot of potential for tourism."

NHS Trust's new iPhone app gives teens access to free sexual advice

HEALTH chiefs have developed an iPhone app to help reduce unplanned teenage pregnancy and improve the sexual health of the county's youngsters.

The Kent C Card app helps youngsters access free condoms, emergency contraception and information about getting treated for sexually transmitted infections.

All teenagers aged 19 and under are able to register with the scheme, which follows on from the C Card initiative, a community-based contraceptive scheme set up in 2007, to help young people access free condoms and advice.

Head of sexual health at Kent Community Health NHS Trust Ruth Herron said the C Card scheme had been successful, with more than 45,850 teenagers registering since 2007, and more than 5,000 hits to the website every month.

"It is a major part of the drive to improve sexual health and reduce unplanned teenage pregnancy in the county," she said.

"However, we recognise the need to be able to give teenagers the information they require on the move as well. This app not only gives people information about the C Card, it can also point them immediately in the direction of the nearest outlet to get free condoms or advice about their sexual health."

The app uses active maps to direct teenagers to where they can get contraception and information.

In the past, some of the county's districts have seen high teenage pregnancy rates, but health bosses say there is an overall downward trend across Kent.

The latest countywide figures show that in 2009 there were 968 conceptions in females aged under 18 and 883 in 2010.

An NHS spokeswoman for Kent and Medway said teenage pregnancy increases the likelihood of living in poverty and leads to poor long-term outcomes for young parents and their children.

She added that young mothers are one third less likely to breastfeed and many would struggle to complete their education, therefore finding it difficult to gain employment.

Anyone who wants to register with the scheme must attend an appointment with a trained advisor. For more information about the C Card go to www.foryoungpeople.co.uk.

BORIS ISLAND

Leaders demand crunch estuary airport meeting with transport minister

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

POLITICAL leaders in Kent have demanded an urgent meeting with ministers after the Government confirmed a formal consultation into an international airport in the Thames Estuary is to go ahead.

And while many of the county's most senior figures continue to privately maintain the scheme will not take off, concerns are growing that the Government's previous dismissal of the idea is rapidly turning into a love affair.

There have so far been two firm proposals put forward. One, dubbed Boris Island after it was proposed by London Mayor Boris Johnson, would see land in the middle of the estuary – close to both Grain and Sheppey – reclaimed. The other, put forward by architect Lord Foster, urges runways to be built on Grain.

Both have been fiercely criticised by Kent County Council, Medway Council, Swale Borough Council and conservationists who point to mass destruction of the landscape and wildlife.

However, after initially being dismissed as "pie in the sky" the proposals have gathered steam in recent months.

Yet there remain nagging doubts that behind the project is an elaborate ploy to help Mr Johnson's coming re-election efforts in May.

Cllr Rodney Chambers, leader of Medway Council, told this paper: "Boris, at the last mayoral election, told the voters of west London if they voted for him he would oppose a third runway and he'd get a reduction in the use of Heathrow.

"He didn't say how. After being elected he came out with this plan for the estuary so he could go back to his voters to say 'look, I'm doing my best'.

"The interesting thing is that in the Autumn Statement the Chancellor said there would be consideration for a study to be undertaken as part of its aviation strategy review. The only thing he did say was that it must not include a third runway at Heathrow – that's a political statement to help Boris."

And while many in Kent believe the construction of such an ambitious proposal – believed to cost around £50 billion – would bring a vital boost to the local economy, local politicians remain, publicly at least, united in opposition.

Chatham and Aylesford Tory MP, Tracey Crouch said the consultation was a "tedious, unnecessary, expensive waste of taxpayer money", adding: "I am firmly against the proposal."

Now, in an open letter, Medway Council has called for an urgent meeting with the Secretary of State for Transport Justine Greening.

It said: "Medway Council runs a campaign against this pipe dream of an airport scheme along with Kent County Council and the RSPB.

"And all Medway councillors back this campaign against an airport on or near the estuary.

"It would appear to us the Mayor of London's office have been privately briefing the Government on its plan and we think a meeting with yourself at the earliest opportunity would provide a good, and much needed, opportunity to discuss face to face the ramifications of such proposals for Medway, the historic county of Kent and all communities near the Thames estuary.

"We feel it is important to point out that 76 per cent of the UK public say they are against the airport, as are many airline industry leaders.

"If it were to go ahead it would have a huge affect on the lives of hundreds of thousands of residents in Medway, as well as across Kent and the wider Thames estuary, and would devastate an area of global environmental significance providing a home for around 250,000 migrating wildfowl annually.

"An airport would cost up to £70bn, would require huge infrastructure and would cut great swathes off the green belt and countryside."

It is signed by the leaders of all four main political groups in Medway: Conservative, Labour, Lib Dem and Independent.

Protect Kent, the county's branch of the Campaign to Protect Rural England, welcomed the chance to highlight the schemes' failings.

Andrew Ogden, campaigns manager, said: "We anticipate that this opportunity to share all of the facts and figures behind these proposals will expose them as the futile schemes they are.

"We will also be calling for a referendum to be held among all residents likely to be impacted."

Charles Buchanan, chief executive of Manston Airport – where many critics of the estuary scheme point to being a better place for development – welcomed the consultation: "It is vital any decision on such a major development is evidence-based and considers all the opportunities and challenges of the solutions proposed."

NEWS IN BRIEF

MP backs yacht plan

CANTERBURY Tory MP Julian Brazier, Co-Chairman of the All-Party Ports and Maritime Group, has backed a motion calling on the Government to examine options for replacing the Royal Yacht without spending public funds.

The motion says: "This House notes the former Royal Yacht Britannia played a major role in British diplomacy and trade promotion, as well as providing a suitable transport for her Majesty on visits to Commonwealth and foreign nations."

Mum abandoned child

A MOTHER who left her six-year-old child home alone for five days has been sent to jail.

The child eventually sought refuge from a neighbour after being cold and hungry.

When police visited the home, they found that the child had been left for almost five days.

Terry, of Willow Road, Dartford, was sentenced to 18 months in prison after admitting child neglect, at Maidstone Crown Court.

The child is now eight years old. Terry also admitted failing to surrender to police.

Det Con Fleur Hardie said: "Children deserve to grow up in a loving environment where they are protected from harm, not subjected to it. I am pleased with this sentence, which shows we will do everything in our power to bring such offenders to justice."

KOS CAMPAIGN

Children's charities benefit from newspaper's festive campaign

A CHARITY that cares for terminally ill children has thanked Archant KOS Media after benefiting from our Kent Kids for Christmas campaign.

Demelza Hospice Care for Children received a cheque for £3,272 from the appeal, which is run by this newspaper, to help good causes that benefit young people in Kent.

Spokeswoman for the Sittingbourne-based charity Helen Francis said the donation would help pay for trips and activities for teenagers who use the service.

"Demelza relies on organisations like Archant Kos Media to help us bring in the much-needed funds year in, year out, as well as raise awareness of what we do," she said.

"We also really appreciate the support the newspaper gives us in terms of publicity. Thanks again to everyone who was involved in this generous donation. It really will make a difference to the children and families who use Demelza."

A cheque for £3,272 was also donated to Dave Lee's Happy Holidays, a week before the panto legend lost his battle with pancreatic cancer.

His Herne Bay-based charity raises money to send sick and underprivileged children on trips and holidays of a lifetime.

Fundraiser Phil Hadler said the volunteers would carry on the work of Dave Lee and continue to help Kent children enjoy holidays and panto trips.

Both charities will also benefit from a further £702 each courtesy of the Archant

Gold Scheme, which sees funds raised through charitable events matched by the company.

Money raised for the Kent Kids for Christmas appeal at a race night at Buckmore Park near Chatham last year was doubled through the programme.

Managing director of Archant KOS Media Paul Stannard said he was delighted to help such good causes.

"Kids are the future of Kent and we want to raise it for the future of our county," he said.

He also paid tribute to his friend of 20 years Dave Lee.

"He was so good to the children in Kent. When you donated money to his charity, you felt like you were giving it to his own kids," he said.

A crook who breaks into school changing rooms while pupils are playing sport is being hunted by police.

Officers are investigating a number of thefts – with schools in Tonbridge and Hildenborough being targeted. Police say they believe the crimes could be linked – but at this stage are not revealing the names of the schools involved.

Items taken include an Omega watch, mobile phones, and an iPod Touch.

SEVENOAKS Community Centre caretakers, Rita and Jim Lepper are to be given a grand retirement send off by the town mayor, councillors, and colleagues – now that Jim has reached 80.

Jim started working as caretaker at Sevenoaks Community Centre in March, 1996. Rita joined Jim at a later date and "together they make an invaluable team who will be greatly missed in retirement", say officials.

➔ Grammar plan attack

MOVES that could see Sevenoaks get a grammar school have been attacked by Labour's shadow education secretary Stephen Twigg. He said: "The Tory-led Government is expanding selection at 11 by the back door, by trying to sneak through changes to the admission code without parliamentary debate. David Cameron promised no return to the 11-plus and no return to a grammar school system."

KNIFE CRIME

International appeal of tragic Harry Potter actor's film festival

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AN annual film festival held in memory of the murdered teenage Harry Potter star Rob Knox is gearing up for its biggest ever year.

The 18-year-old was killed in May, 2008, in Sidcup, just after he'd finished filming his role as Marcus Belby in Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince.

He had signed on to be in Deathly Hallows.

Rob died after being stabbed outside a bar when he intervened in a fight to protect his brother Jamie, 17 at the time, from two men, one of whom was armed with a pair of knives.

After his death the Rob Knox Foundation was created to campaign against knife and gun crime and promote citizenship, and all the funds from the film festival will go to the fund.

Organisers are expecting a record number of free entries to the Rob Knox Film Festival 2012 as it continues to grow in reputation since its launch in 2009.

Set up by festival director Michael Wearing, from Middle Stoke on the Hoo Peninsula, it aims to raise the profile of positive behaviour by young people; provide an opportunity for locally made films to reach a wider audience; give an opportunity for young people to see independent films from around the world; offer learning opportunities for young filmmakers; and identify films that tackle social issues or that could be used in an educational context.

There are eight award categories this year: best film; best director; best screenplay; best actor; best actress; best film under five minutes; best community film tackling a social issue; and best 99 per cent film which raises the profile of positive activity by young people.

Last year Edilberto Restino cut short filming in Brazil to collect his award for best director. Previous award winners have attended from USA, Greece and Belgium.

Mr Wearing said: "It is a local festival aimed at local people especially the young, but we have gained an international reputation.

"We know filmmakers at all stages of their careers and those just doing it for fun have a desire for their films to be seen by others, and we try to make that happen for as many as we can."

Filmmakers wishing to have their efforts considered for screening at the festival should email

robknoxff@btinternet.com for an entry form.

The festival opens on May 29 at New Generation Church, Sidcup, and ends with the awards night at Cineworld Bexleyheath on June 6.

Rob had been an actor from the age of 11, with some appearances as an extra before bagging a small part in The Bill. He also appeared in the Channel 4 reality show Trust me I'm a Teenager, and the BBC comedy After You've Gone. His first film was King Arthur in 2004.

Karl Bishop, 25, from Lewisham, was found guilty of murder in February, 2009, and jailed for life with a minimum of 20 years. Police said he showed no remorse.

Cat charity near 'crisis' point as recession sees rise in jilted pets

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

TUNBRIDGE Wells cats are in crisis. So many residents are 'feline' the financial pinch and giving their pets up for adoption that cat rescue centres are being over run.

Now the Tunbridge Wells, Crowborough and District branch of Cats Protection has issued an emergency appeal in response to a dramatic rise in the number of unwanted cats needing the charity's help.

There is usually a pick up in pets being handed in after Christmas, but staff said this year they have been overwhelmed.

As a result, the charity – which normally looks after around 6,000 cats nationally at any one time – has issued an emergency appeal asking people to consider adopting a cat to stop the situation getting any worse.

The group, which was founded in 1927 as the Cats Protection League and later changed its named in 1998, said new owners are failing to come forward in their usual numbers, as money for feed and cats becomes ever more stretched.

Tunbridge Wells homing officer Miriam Bennett said: "This surge in unwanted cats is extremely distressing. It is a crisis for the cats and it piles additional pressure onto our volunteers. The branch is already stretched to the limit looking after the cats in its care.

"We are currently inundated with cats because of the recession; people are having to leave their homes and are often unable to take their cats with them.

"We are struggling to find space for them in our foster homes. I fear this could push the branch to breaking point if it continues and leave us unable to help many more unwanted cats so we are urgently asking for help," said Miriam.

"If people are unable to adopt a cat or kitten then a donation of just £16 could enable us to care for one extra cat – providing them with food, veterinary care and a warm place to sleep."

If you would like to adopt a cat or make a donation, please call Miriam at Cats Protection's Tunbridge Wells, Crowborough and District branch on 01892 516377 or go to the website www.cats.org.uk.

STAR'S DEATH

Son pays tribute to popular, funny and generous Dave Lee

By Marijke Cox

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THAT familiar smile and quick wit the people of Kent knew and loved so well stayed with panto legend Dave Lee right until the very end.

In true Dave Lee-style, when asked how he was feeling, the popular comic whipped the oxygen mask off his face and replied: "I'm ready for the Olympics."

Sadly, the 64-year-old passed away just hours later, losing his battle with pancreatic cancer and leaving behind three children, six grandchildren, and casting a shadow over the county which loved him.

His eldest son Darren Legge, 44, a chef at the Red Lion pub in Stodmarsh, said the family had been overwhelmed with support.

"It's been an upsetting time for us, but we've had so many phone calls from people here and from further afield – I didn't realise just how popular he was," he said.

"He was a wonderful father, he made people laugh and he did so much to help others."

Dave, who lived for many years in Herne before moving to Canterbury, was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer in October, forcing him to pull out of the pantomime Cinderella at the Marlowe in Canterbury, where he had performed more than 1,000 times over 16 years.

He died on Monday, with his family by his side.

Mr Legge said: "The last couple of weeks had been a bit harder for him and on Sunday he was struggling for breath with a chest infection.

"He looked well until the end and smiled right through. He was sat there with his oxygen mask speaking to us.

"He was a Tottenham fan and was asking lots of questions. He was playing around and asking how they did.

"When he was asked by the doctor how he felt he took his mask off and said he was ready for the Olympics."

His father's funeral is being held at Canterbury Cathedral at 2pm on Monday, January 30, followed by a private family service at Barham crematorium, where Dave's late wife Linda was cremated four years ago.

Only two weeks ago it was announced Dave would receive the major honour of becoming a Freeman of the City from Canterbury City Council for his tireless fundraising work and entertainment.

Chief executive Colin Carmichael said the ceremony at the Guildhall on Tuesday, January 31, would still go ahead and the comic would be made a Freeman posthumously.

"We know how pleased and excited Dave was about the award and look forward to welcoming his family and many, many friends to the Guildhall to what we hope will be a celebration of his life and achievements," he said.

Suggestions have also been put forward for a permanent tribute to Dave outside The Marlowe in the form of a bench.

'The Bench' was a regular set-piece performed at the Marlowe pantomime which became eagerly anticipated by the audience.

Mr Legge said: "It would be nice for the tribute to have something to do with the theatre. I think it's a good idea to have The Bench."

Dave, who had three children, Darren, Justin, 40, and Debbie, 42, started his career

Charity's volunteers vow to continue Happy Holidays legacy left by comic

DAVE Lee was best known for his legendary pantomime performances – but the funnyman did more than entertain the masses.

In addition to his showbiz career, the star worked tirelessly for charity, launching his own organisation 15 years ago with wife Linda to raise funds to send sick and underprivileged children on holiday.

Dave Lee's Happy Holidays reached the £2 million mark just over a year ago.

Speaking to Archant KOS Media at the time of the milestone, he said he was absolutely thrilled.

"Every penny of the money raised gets spent sending children and their families on holiday – no-one in the charity gets paid," he said.

"It's not only the children that need a holiday, but the families, too. It's natural for the rest of the family to be put on the back-burner when there is a sick child.

"Or in other cases the family can't afford to go away on holiday. This gives them a chance to go somewhere they have never been before."

Since its launch, the charity has sent thousands of children on holiday to places including Camber Sands – where the organisation has five holiday homes – Tenerife, Lapland and Florida.

Every Christmas, youngsters are taken to the pantomime at the Marlowe in Canterbury.

Happy Holidays' corporate fundraiser and close friend of Dave, Phil Hadler, said the volunteers intended to carry on the comic's hard work.

"We're all feeling down in the dumps; it's hard to imagine running the charity without Dave, he was the figurehead," he said.

"He was always at the front, helping out if a Camber caravan needed sorting out or anything else that had to be done, and he was there for the events. He could never believe how generous people were and was amazed with what people did to help."

Mr Hadler said, however, that Dave was never the same since his wife Linda died four years ago.

But the star, who was also patron of the East Kent Animal Centre, pushed on with fundraising events including his annual charity golf day at Chart Hills Golf Club, near Ashford, with celebrity pals in tow.

Spurs boss Harry Redknapp, Gillingham manager Andy Hessenthaler, and former England footballer Luther Blissett are among the sporting stars to attend over the years.

Dave's friends Jim Davidson, Bobby Davro and Bradley Walsh were also regulars at the event.

His tireless charity work saw him receive an MBE in 2003.

Stars, sportsmen and politicians honour loss of 'a true gentleman'

TRIBUTES poured in this week as the county woke to the sad news that much-loved comic and panto star Dave Lee had died.

If there was any doubt about how much he was loved then the outpourings proved just how much the funnyman meant to the people of Kent.

Marlowe pantomime producer Paul Hendy described him as "Kent's best mate".

"We always billed him as a 'legend' and as far as the local community was concerned, this was true," he said.

Canterbury's Marlowe Theatre director Mark Everett called it a sad day for the theatre, where Dave had performed more than 1,000 times over 16 years.

He said: "Dave never had a bad word to say about anybody - he was absolutely wonderful."

His celebrity pals also paid tribute to the star.

Friend Jim Davidson said it had been a terrible shock to everyone.

"Dave was a great comedian and a great bloke. Everybody liked him. He had something that all comedians strive for - likeability. He was a great mate to all of us, but now he is with the love of his life Linda and on the January 31 he will receive the Freedom of Heaven instead."

Comic Bradley Walsh paid tribute to his friend on Twitter: "He brought smiles to so many faces as a drummer and singer and had several records released. He went on to form his own comedy show band, acting as both lead singer and impressionist.

But it was a chance meeting with Eric Morecambe that changed his life forever.

Eric had watched Dave performing with his group and advised him to start a solo career as a comedian or actor in his own right.

He began his TV career as a warm up man for Michael Parkinson, Michael Aspel and Jimmy Tarbuck.

Dave then appeared in front of the cameras on shows like Des O'Connor Tonight, the Generation Game, A Royal Gala for HRH Prince Charles, The Brian Conley Show and Big Break and recently hosting his own golf series Through The Green. He was also nominated in the British Comedy Awards.

He was also a regular on radio and over the past 25 years he worked in pantomime, mostly appearing at the Marlowe Theatre in Canterbury.

He received an MBE for his work for charity, raising more than £2 million through Dave Lee's Happy Holidays.

both as the comedian and through his charity."

Kent wicketkeeper Geraint Jones said: "A statue of him outside the Marlowe is deserved after his years in panto and for his charity work."

As well as his time on stage, the entertainer also spent many years as a non-executive director for Gillingham FC.

Manager Andy Hesselthaler, who had worked alongside Dave doing charity work for the past 10 years, called him a "true gentleman".

"He thought about everybody else rather than himself. He was a larger than life character and had a heart of gold," he said.

Dave was also a commentator for all-star cricket club Lashings in Maidstone. Scott Charlton, who was Dave's co-commentator at Lashings games, said he was "heartbroken" by the news.

The popular entertainer was a friend of Archant KOS Media managing director Paul Stannard who had known him for nearly 20 years.

"What he did for kids and their families within Kent should never be forgotten," he said.

Politicians were also among the many to express sadness at his death.

MP for North Thanet Sir Roger Gale said:

"Dave Lee was one of those rare people who spread light and laughter to all around them."

MUSIC

Rockers' debt to Dartford

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

A TV show has detailed a little known but vital Kent contribution to the UK's music boom of the 1960s and 70s – which helped to define the sound of rock.

The Beatles, the Rolling Stones, the Shadows, the Dave Clark Five and the Yardbirds all had one thing in common during the 1960s – they shared their stage with Vox amplifiers.

The programme Vox Pop: How Dartford Powered the British Beat Boom tells the story of how in the 1950s the owner of a small music company in Dartford – which specialised in importing accordions – realised there was a rising interest in new-fangled electric guitars.

Some of the nation's top musicians, including Brian May of Queen, Bruce Welch of the Shadows, Justin Haywood of the Moody Blues, and Status Quo's Francis Rossi, and Vox workers of the time, explain how the small company made such a big impact.

"The sound had to be good and the sound was good", said singer Marty Wilde.

Also featured are contemporary bands including The Horrors explaining how the Vox sound influences their music.

As there was a post-war trade embargo on American amplifiers such as Fender and Fender, described as "the sound of America in the 60s", and the Marshall, "more power, more distortion".

New up-coming band The Beatles loved the equipment and Vox became part of their sound and their stylish on-stage image, while The Rolling Stones – who also came from Dartford – loved their innovative guitars as well as the amps.

Reg Clark was sales manager of the company's London store when the manager of a band came in and said he needed equipment – for free.

He told the BBC: "He said the band is called The Beatles and they've been playing the Star Club in Hamburg."

Suddenly, because of the publicity surrounding the Liverpool band, everyone wanted Vox equipment and the company hit the big time, made a fortune, and then lost it all by 1967.

Vince Rogers, the show's producer said: "The programme was such a joy to work on because everyone involved seemed to have a genuine affection for Vox products. The musicians seem to love the eccentricities of the lo-tech valve driven amplifiers.

"And you could feel the enthusiasm of the ex-employees who used to work in the factories in Dartford.

"When they gathered together for the filming of interviews, they stayed for hours chatting about the good old days."

■ The programme airs on BBC Four on Friday, January 27, at 10pm.

IMMIGRATION

Talk breaks the silence over centuries-old African heritage

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THE arrival of black people in Kent goes back centuries, and an expert on the period will be giving an illustrated talk on some of the county's first immigrants.

Prof David Killingray from Sevenoaks, is giving the talk later this month in Tunbridge Wells.

He said: "I will be talking about black people, that is people of African origin and descent, in Kent from about 1600 onwards.

"Most people think Britain only had a black population after the Second World War, particularly after 1948.

"Kent being a maritime county and close to the metropolis, had a number of black people in places like Gravesend and the Medway Towns and the coastal towns. There were all kinds of people: students, doctors, dentists, preachers and labourers, of all ages and sexes.

"We should be interested in this time because it is part of British history and people don't know about it. If you pick up the average history book, you will find very little if anything about black people in Britain.

"You won't find very much about immigrants in Britain, actually. Scratch under the surface for most of us and we will find we are of an immigrant population from one place or another and we make up a sizeable part of the British population."

The talk will be at the Tunbridge Wells Museum and Art Gallery, and is part of a series of illustrated talks.

The professor said the presentation introduces a true hidden history from more than 400 years ago.

African sailors and travellers were a common sight at coastal and riverside ports from the late 1500s.

And the number of black people coming to the county increased during the 1700s as Britain became dominant in the transatlantic trading system, including the African slave trade.

Black servants lived in Kentish homes, but among visitors was Olaudah Equiano, the former slave whose autobiography was published in 1789.

In the 1800s local sources provide accounts of African preachers, missionaries, students, doctors, as well as artisans and vagabonds, and entertainers such as the great actor Ira Aldridge.

Prof Killingray is well placed as an expert on the subject. He is emeritus professor at Goldsmiths, and a senior research fellow in the School of Advanced Study, University of London; and also honorary professor of history, University of Stellenbosch.

He has written a number of books and many articles on aspects of African, Caribbean, Imperial, and English history.

He said: "Black people are part of our glorious cosmopolitan nature of Britain. Kent's ports sent ships to get slaves from the west coast of Africa, but they also brought them back as sailors – you were likely to lose some of your crew so you would pick up some local people.

"Black people were also sent here by Christian missions to be educated and some of them went to St Augustine's in Canterbury, so we had a succession of young men being trained in the Christian ministry. They also learned how to play cricket there. This was happening in the 1860s and up to the 1930s."

The talk is at the Tunbridge Wells Museum and Art Gallery Camden Centre on Wednesday, January 25, at 7.45pm, with tickets costing £5 from the museum or by calling 01892 554171.

Damp is a creeping menace that affects thousands of homes across Kent.

It rots woodwork and carpets, peels wallpaper and causes fungus and mould growth on walls.

During the cold, wet months damp can wreak havoc in your home and on your health. Treating your property for damp now will help to keep you warm and dry at this time of year. You could also save money because dry walls are better insulators, and a damp free home will feel more comfortable.

It is important to tackle damp because ignoring it can store up serious problems and also pose potential health risks – especially if you have a medical condition such as asthma or rheumatism.

For years, people have tried to solve damp problems. Traditional methods included injecting chemical solutions but unfortunately this can involve contractors coming into your home, drilling into brickwork, and hacking off and replacing plaster.

The work can be messy, intrusive and your home will need redecorating once it has been done.

And despite all this upheaval, there is no guarantee that it will work in the long term. Chemical barriers tend to break down over time, and once this happens – that damp will be back.

The Holland Damp Proofing System is a breath of fresh air that can permanently rid your home of the scourge of damp.

The idea is simple: draw out the moisture and the damp will disappear! The System involves a series of damp-regulating bricks which neatly fit into specially prepared niches in the external walls of your home, close to the ground.

These cleverly allow air to flow into the brick chambers and out again – circulating airflow through the inside of the wall which evaporates the moisture, drying out the wall and allowing it to breathe.

Holland's no-chemicals system is mess-free and as the work is completed from the outside there is no need to replaster.

No chemicals, no mess and no replastering – your property dries out... and stays dry for good. It can be used on most types of wall (including stone) and can be used on all types of property at ground level.

The company prides itself on its high standards of customer service. Holland Damp Proofing's staff handle all aspects of the business and they don't use commission-based sales people.

With thousands of satisfied customers, Holland Damp Proofing is the leading non-chemical damp proofing company in the UK, and it doesn't trade under any other name.

EXPLORER

Antarctica trek an 'overwhelmingly awesome' challenge for lone woman explorer on skis

By Marijke Cox

editorial@archant.co.uk

IT'S ONLY been two years since Felicity Aston's celebrated all-female trek in Antarctica – but the intrepid explorer is back out on the ice already.

This time, however, the 33-year-old adventurer is going it alone and taking on a challenge which could see her become the first woman in history to make a solo crossing of Antarctica.

Miss Aston, from Birchington, admitted before she left in November that no amount of experience or training could prepare her for the mental strain of being so isolated.

So, one month into her trip, this newspaper spoke to her via satellite phone.

From her tent in Antarctica, Miss Aston told Archant KOS Media how difficult, but inspiring, the trip had been so far.

"When the plane first dropped me off it was a real shock. It doesn't matter how much preparation I'd done, it was surprising how immensely tough it was to be that much on my own," she said.

"For the first 18 days every day was a struggle. Back then the thought of being where I am now was inconceivable – 32 days down I'm by the Thiel mountains with the sun shining down and I'm two thirds of the way through.

"The mental state of being on my own has been hard. In the first leg I was up a glacier, the altitude affected me quite badly, I had a really bad cough and was struggling for breath. I would start moving and then moments later I would have to stop and cough. I was feeling sick, it affected my attitude.

"Every morning I would wake up and think: 'I really don't want to be here – what was I thinking?' These demons would say to me: 'It's too far, there's too much exposure'.

"I was very vulnerable. Every day I had to get over that and tell myself I had to ski and get on with it.

"I have to be very careful about what I let myself think about. Becoming an emotional wreck doesn't help me.

"If I start thinking about family and home I start crying and my goggles steam up and I get a layer of ice so I can't see.

"That's not a good thing when you're skiing."

Miss Aston said a high point of her trip was reaching the South Pole.

"This was where I saw people. I arrived in the worst weather. I couldn't see – I kept thinking 'I mustn't miss it'. They knew I was coming and they waited for me. It was lovely to have people there. I was worried about leaving though.

"But this leg of the journey I must have got used to being on my own. It's also been warmer with less altitude.

"I have these strange moments of feeling absolutely euphoric. The other day I got out of the tent and it made me want to cry. Being out in Antarctica, it's overwhelmingly awesome.

"I have these moments of great joy – it's really bizarre. This leg of the journey I've been feeling absolutely invincible."

Trust's plea for help to save historic home

By Chris Murphy
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

ONE of Kent's most important buildings is crumbling and needs urgent renovation work.

Some £2.7 million needs spending on Knole, near Sevenoaks, so an appeal for funds has been launched.

It is in dire need of emergency external repairs. Modern cement render on the east front of the building has cracked, letting water into the state rooms on view to the public. The roof also needs repair, along with a host of broken stonework.

Work will start in April and is likely to take about two years to complete. But money is needed now to get the ball rolling, said the National Trust.

This is in preparation for the proposed Inspired by Knole project to raise awareness, due in 2014, but which is dependent on the success of a £7.5m Heritage Lottery Fund bid.

The appeal will go to

HISTORIC GEM: Knole in Sevenoaks is in urgent need of repair

250,000 National Trust supporters with a connection to Knole, and asks them to help save one of the Trust's most precious and fragile buildings.

It was originally built to be a palace for the Archbishops of Canterbury in the 15th century. Then it was annexed as a Tudor residence and finally remodelled by the Sackville family during the 17th century.

The building holds important collections of upholstered furniture and tapestries from the royal palaces, but the elements are taking their toll, and officials want to fight back.

The emergency exterior works are the first phase in a programme that aims to insulate, heat, rewire and install lighting and control systems.

The collections will then be returned to rooms with stable conservation conditions.

Marketing manager Jane Maltby said: "Knole is one of the most important houses in the country, but the problem is people don't know it yet."

"Our wider plans are to open more rooms and let people see what a fantastic place this is. Before we can do that, we have to do these repairs."

Olympic hopeful's best foot forward for health campaign

By Marijke Cox

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A RISING race walking star has become the latest Olympic hopeful to throw his weight behind a new health campaign.

Tom Bosworth, from Sevenoaks, gave his backing to the Healthy Passport Club, which has been rolled out by NHS West Kent – one of 17 pilot sites across England chosen by the Government to develop a local Change4Life scheme.

It looks to encourage positive lifestyle changes in families and promotes healthy eating and living.

Tom, 22, who is part of Team GB and a member of Tonbridge Athletics Club, said the scheme was a brilliant idea.

"I am delighted to be one of the Health Heroes supporting the passport club which helps make exercising fun and rewarding for everyone," he said.

The Healthy Passport Club's 'Taking Steps Challenge' is well underway, which encourages all members to take up the challenge of doing 150 active minutes a week.

Tom, who holds the 5km outdoor British walk record with an impressive 19 minutes and 29 seconds, is in training for the 20km race walking event in London 2012.

While his fast speeds won't be for everyone, he urged people to get involved in the activity.

"There are all kinds of walking, from gentle family strolls, to a brisk walk with your dog, or perhaps Nordic walking, to the more competitive sport of race walking that I do," he said.

"Find the one that suits you best and the Healthy Passport Club will help you to set goals, track your steps and reward you on the way."

GB Olympic hockey hopeful Ashley Jackson is also backing the campaign.

Celebrity supporters of the Healthy Passport Club include BBC One's Strictly Come Dancing star Anton Du Beke and presenter Gloria Hunniford, who both live in Sevenoaks. Health Heroes partners include the Ramblers' Association, Maidstone Leisure Centre, and Explore Kent.

The Healthy Passport Club is open to everyone, of any age or ability, and offers support including healthy recipe ideas, suggestions of local activities, newsletters, prize draws, members' stories and top tips to keep you on track. The club already boasts a massive 14,000 members.

All six borough councils in west Kent are providing free healthy walks and people can find a walk close to them at <https://www.healthyclub.nhs.uk/pages/activities-search/>.

WILDLIFE

University joins the battle to halt the trade in endangered species

By Rob Colman

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

SCIENTISTS at the University of Kent have been working on new ways to crack down on the illegal international trade in endangered species.

Many may think of endangered species living in faraway lands, but Kent holds the largest UK population of orchids – they flourish in the county and are subject to illegal trade.

Two projects are being led by the university's Durrell Institute of Conservation and Ecology, one of which has partners in the Indian Ocean island of Madagascar.

The Durrell Institute is working with with Madagasikara Voakajy, a conservation group working to protect native Madagascar species and their habitats. But the island's government, International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN), Conservation International, and the Department of Animal Biology at the University of Antananarivo, are also all involved.

Researchers are working to support the sustainable and legal trade of some chameleons, and are also working to conserve and protect the most threatened chameleon species from extinction.

This involves working with communities, government and protected area management to reduce destruction of key chameleon habitats and the illegal collection for the pet trade.

This part of the project focuses on the application of scientific information to evaluate whether individual chameleon species can be collected from the wild without harming the overall population.

Professor Richard Griffiths from the Durrell Institute said: "Madagascar is a hotspot for illegal trade, as it's a very poor country with little money.

"There are 74 species of chameleon, which are now being targeted for the pet trade. These chameleons are not easy to keep, they go for high prices and are aimed at specialist collectors, fetching in excess of £300 each.

"We are working with partners in Madagascar to monitor the species listed and make sure the trade is watched and will not be detrimental to the chameleon population."

The Durrell Institute is also working on projects to rid the flourishing illegal online trade of rare species which is threatening the survival of much endangered UK species, including orchids that bloom in Kent.

The county is home to some of Britain's rarest orchids, like the early spider orchid, which grows at Samphire Hoe, near Dover.

Work is being done to develop technology that will sift through millions of items for sale on the internet, and spot those that could be criminal.

Dr Dave Roberts said: "We are not trying to ban online trading or anything like that, the internet itself isn't the threat, but it's another tool to market products and species.

"It's more that we are working with police to target illegal

Picture: VELELA

THREATENED: The scientists' efforts will go towards protecting foreign species, such as the chameleon (left), as well as those much closer to home, including the early spider orchid here in Kent activity, as it's a worldwide problem to identify items for sale.

"I have a special interest in the illegal trade of orchids, from live plants in trade, to pressed plants, which is something the Victorians did.

"Kent has such a diversity of orchid species, in fact Kent is the orchid capital of the UK, so it is important to monitor this rare and beautiful group of plants."

KENT REMEMBERED

WONDERFUL SIGHT: A Pacific Class locomotive pulls the boat train from London to the Kent coast

Right on track during railway's golden age

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE STORY of some of the magnificent steam locomotives constructed at the Ashford Railway Works, and the engines which pulled the boat trains from London to Folkestone and Dover, are the subject of a new book.

The Original Bulleid Pacifics, edited by John Scott-Morgan, is part of publisher Haynes Great Locomotives Series and features two trains which proudly bore a Kentish name throughout the 1950s and early 60s.

The railway engines were the brainchild of design engineer Oliver Bulleid and were first constructed during World War Two when they proved vital in transporting supplies and personnel across the whole of the Southern Railway network, which included Kent.

They were a familiar site pulling trucks containing military hardware to the docks at Chatham and defences on the Isle of Sheppey during the conflict with Hitler's Germany.

Later the locomotives were modified and updated and trains such as the Golden Arrow thundered across the Kent countryside heading for the Channel ports.

Ashford was one of the UK's most important centres for the construction of rolling stock.

It first opened for business in 1847, on a 185-acre site to the south east of the main town, and by 1850 more than 130 new homes had been built for workers at the plant.

STEAM DRIVEN: Kentish Belle

Run by what was then South Eastern Railway the new suburb was given the official name Alfred Town – but everyone else called it Newtown, the name by which the area is still known.

On January 21, 1899, the company merged with the London, Chatham and Dover Railway and Ashford's works expanded, as they did 22 years later when both the London, Brighton and South Coast Railway and the London and South Western Railway were also bought into the fold.

During World War Two, Ashford, along with plants at Brighton and Eastleigh, was vital for war work and the town was a frequent target of raids by the Luftwaffe, which resulted in the deaths of 83 civilians.

After the war locomotives continued to be hugely important in Britain's continuing slow economic upturn and the Golden Arrow services were reintroduced.

Initial timing runs from London Victoria to what was then called Dover Maritime Station started in April, 1946.

Initially pulled by Oliver Bulleid's Merchant Navy Class locomotives before the more efficient Pacifics took over, the trains were a valuable morale booster and reminder of more affluent times as they travelled across the Kentish landscape.

Two notable trains also came into operation in the early 1950s and were both pulled by Bulleid-designed Battle of Britain Class locomotives, which bore the names of RAF squadrons and airfields.

The Kentish Belle ran from Victoria to Margate via Ramsgate, with coaches detaching at Faversham bound for Canterbury, and The Man of Kent which ran via Ashford, Folkestone, Dover and Deal to Thanet stations.

Another of the same class, appropriately named Winston Churchill, headed one of the most famous trains has which ever travelled on Britain's lines – the funeral train of the war-time leader.

The electrification of the network spelt the end of the steam powered locos. But some still remain in operation on heritage lines including the Battle of Britain Class Manston.

This was withdrawn from service by British Railways in 1964, and purchased by a preservation group.

It was first displayed at Richborough Power Station before further restoration work took place in a specialist workshop on a farm near Sellindge.

In September, 2008, it was put into service on the Swanage Line in Dorset – where it still pulls vintage carriages from historic Corfe Castle to the coast.

It pays to study all options

Going to university need not be as expensive as prospective students fear as Matt Bannister, careers adviser at MidKent College, explains.

RECESSION, austerity, unemployment – three words that have no doubt come to define the last few years and probably many more to come.

Combined with the headline-grabbing news about increased tuition fees, young people will be forgiven for thinking there's simply no way they can afford a university education.

But while the higher costs may well be a cause of great concern to many families, prospective students owe it to themselves to explore all available options before deciding they can't afford the next step up the educational ladder.

While UCAS will not release its final figures until the end of this month, the data for November showed a 12.9 per cent year-on-year fall in applications from young people wanting to start university this year, and a 6.4 per cent reduction in December.

While the increased tuition fees must be partly to blame, there's a worry many young people won't have researched their options due to all the doom-and-gloom headlines.

One of the many attractions of university is that it's away from home, presenting the opportunity for greater independence. But if a student is willing to sacrifice that aspect, there's always the option to attend a university closer to home.

This removes or drastically reduces the cost of rent for many people, and also reduces the temptation to spend more money on 'entertainment'.

It also shouldn't be forgotten that for students who come from less well-off backgrounds, there are a number of ways they can access additional support, wherever they decide to study.

For example, many universities offer bursaries and non-payable loans, which can be dependant on pre-agreed performance or other elements such as sporting endeavour or demographic criteria (e.g. coming from a military family or being the first member of the family to access higher education).

In addition, some schemes operated independently or administered by local government have been set up by philanthropists past and present to enable students from certain localities to go to university.

Information on these opportunities is available through portals such as www.turn2us.org.uk.

Meanwhile, universities setting the highest tuition fees must also prove to the Government they are doing more to enable young people from low-income families to attend, and to widen participation from under-represented groups.

The bottom line is that prospective students should not

There is always the option to attend university closer to home automatically assume they cannot go to university before they research the true cost and assistance available to them.

But even those who still decide university is not for them should not be put off moving into higher education.

Institutions like MidKent College offer a wide range of HE courses – including Higher National Diplomas (HND) and foundation degrees – to ensure students have access to the qualifications that are right for them. There are also plans to offer an HND in sports management and a new Level Six programme – equivalent to a degree – in business management and enterprise.

Tuition fees for full-time HE courses for the 2012-13 academic year – all of which are validated by either the University of Kent or Canterbury Christ Church University – are £5,700.

KOS COMMENT

Dave's memory will always raise a smile

DAVE Lee was one of life's good guys, helping everyone else before himself while making them laugh at the same time.

News of his death sparked an outpouring of grief that he probably never would have expected, proving the impact he had on the lives of the people of Kent.

His smile was infectious and his desire to help others less fortunate than himself, admirable. And it was the joy he brought every year in the Marlowe pantomime that many will best remember him for.

Kent may be a slightly duller place without Dave Lee, but he was so full of laughter and kindness his memory will always shine on.

Time to fight – again

THE Government seems to be changing its tune over London Mayor Boris Johnson's hopes for an estuary airport.

But they seem to forget that Kent has won the battle against such plans before, and with the gloves off once more, there's enough fight left to ensure victory again.

Deafened by this TV noise

MANY thanks to the writer of the letter regarding the awful background noises on television programmes.

One begins to wonder if anyone on TV is able to speak without some 'music' in the background, which seems to be too loud to even hear what is being said.

How I wish in all the nature programmes we could hear the birds singing, the rivers rushing by, and even the wind in the trees. Even Monty Don cannot walk down his garden path without percussion.

It is all so ridiculous and so unnecessary.

I understand many have voiced this opinion to the television studios, but to no avail. This could cut the cost of programmes in doing so.

I recall a garden programme in which Alan Tichmarsh entered the garden scene remarking how lovely it is to come into the garden and hear the birds in the morning.

We, the viewers, could not hear any birds – only the sounds of an orchestra.

Please, let us participate in being 'in' the picture; especially the elderly, or those who cannot get out and about as they once did.

At least let us enjoy the sounds of nature again.

There is a special place for music, but never intruding in another programme. I am sure am not alone in view.

Modernising the Royal Mail

FOLLOWING the recent article in KoS (January 8) we would like to clarify some points about the modernisation of Royal Mail's operations in Kent.

Royal Mail is investing £70 million in improving our operations for our customers and for our people.

This includes building the new Medway mail centre in Rochester, and investing in new machinery for sorting mail faster and more efficiently.

Mail processing work will transfer to the new mail centre on a phased basis during spring/summer this year.

Royal Mail and the Communication Workers Union (CWU) are working jointly to ensure minimum disruption to individuals and to ensure the transition is as smooth as possible.

There is a joint commitment to avoiding compulsory redundancies at all costs and no individuals will be forced to reduce or increase their hours as part of the changes.

With people demonstrating reasonable flexibility, Royal Mail expects that everyone who wants to remain in the business will be able to do so.

Some people have chosen not to stay, and around 100 individuals have so far left on voluntary terms. A further 80 people are expected to leave on voluntary terms over the next few months.

These changes are vital to put Royal Mail on a secure and sustainable footing and enable us to continue to deliver a high level of service to our customers.

Trust Tories with education

I WAS delighted to see Sevenoaks will soon have a grammar school of its own.

This is to be encouraged.

Kent's education committee needs to put its foot firmly on this particular accelerator, even if, politically, Education Secretary Michael Gove is presently reluctant to do so.

The latest national figures show that in areas where the Conservatives have maintained control over the years, pass rates in GCSEs have been twice as high as in those areas where Labour has held sway.

The clear inference to be drawn is that you should either move to Tory-controlled areas or, if you can't, vote Conservative and often. Don't leave your children at the mercy of a Labour council.

The Labour party has betrayed our children, dumbing down educational standards, eviscerating universities, and in a spiteful act of vandalism, seeking to destroy our grammar school system which had, almost single-handedly, and for five centuries, brought about the very upward social mobility, equality and class eradication we all seek.

Now thanks to Labour's half-century of fumbling interference and bigoted reasoning, children from sink estates can expect to remain on sink estates, educationally disabled, intellectually stunted and prey to drugs, gang cultures and a lifetime of sofa polishing. It is a crime.

The shame is that Labour councillors and Members of Parliament can't be banged up for it. We need more grammar schools, not fewer.

Gerry O'Donnell, Ramsgate

Green policies tinted with red

RAY Duff really is an expert when it comes to cherry-picking reports he agrees with (Energy needs policy rethink, January 15).

The Greens' science is far from 'irrefutable', but to endlessly argue every fine point would be unproductive – though I could.

Suffice to say that suggestions for subsidised alternative energy are pipedreams that would cost this country dear.

For example, in countries that have gone for 'renewables' in a big way, experience has shown 'green jobs' are something of a myth; more are lost than gained, and renewables simply don't produce anywhere near enough consistent, reliable power.

The real revelation of his letter is what the Greens really stand for. Those "social, economic and environmental" ideas with their "cooperative society, social enterprises and worker councils" smack of neo-communism, social engineering with a puritanical bent.

Green is the new red.

Will pension change for the good or bad?

WORK for a company that is closing membership of its final salary pension scheme and instead will offer a 'defined contribution' scheme. We have been given a brochure about this, but I am sorry to say I cannot understand it. Can you explain in simple terms the difference between the two schemes and say whether I will get more pension or less?

LET me start with a bit of reassurance. The details you sent me show that the pension you have earned so far is safe, and your existing pension benefits are preserved. But the future is less predictable. You are currently in what is called a defined benefit scheme. Your employer promises a certain amount of pension and then tailors your contributions and the company's contributions so that when you retire there is enough money to pay your pension for the rest of your life. A defined contribution scheme stands this on its head. You and your employer will both pay contributions, but there is no promise of how much pension they will provide. Everything depends on two factors. First of all there is the question of where your pension contributions will be invested, and how well those investments will perform. And secondly, there is the question of what annuity rates will be like when you retire. However much there is in your pension pot will be used to buy you an annuity – a pension for life. But annuity rates change all the time, based on how long people are expected to live, and on whether interest rates are high or low. For example, roughly 20 years ago, a pension pot of £100,000 would have bought you an annuity of about £15,000 at age 65. Since then, life expectancy has increased, so annuity providers know they must pay out for longer, but interest rates have tumbled. The result is that £100,000 will now get you an annuity of less than £6,000 a year. Suddenly, job pensions have become unpredictable – unless you are lucky enough to be in one of the dwindling number of final salary schemes, like public sector workers are. There is no simple advice anyone can offer except perhaps to keep a regular watch on how your pension fund is growing. If it looks as if your pension will be less than expected, you may have time to increase your contributions, assuming you can afford to do this. It would be a pleasant surprise if your new pension scheme paid a bigger pension than the old scheme, so be prepared for a poorer retirement.

You can buy form CON36 from a legal stationers, or any solicitor or advice agency can help. But this type of power ends automatically if you cease to be able to make your own decisions. A Lasting Power of Attorney would continue in force, but this is rather more serious, and you should discuss this with a solicitor.

Tread carefully in overdraft minefield

By Adam Aiken

Editor MyMoney 24

EVEN maths boffins struggle to understand how unauthorised overdraft charges work, with complex fee structures making it virtually impossible for customers to calculate how much they are going to be charged by their banks.

That's the verdict of consumer group Which?, after it asked a group of volunteers to work out how much they would be charged in a number of scenarios.

Despite one of the Which? volunteers being a maths PhD student, none of them got all the calculations right. Between them, they managed to get only seven out of 48 charges correct between them.

Which? said there were numerous complex rules and additional fees on top of overdraft charges. It said Lloyds TSB's fees were particularly confusing, with three different types of fees in addition to charging interest on unplanned overdrafts.

The research also found that customers at one institution can pay much more for unauthorised overdrafts than those at another.

For example, Nationwide charged the highest fees – £50 – for customers making one payment from their accounts while being overdrawn for two days in a row in a month. The equivalent fees at Halifax were £10.

Which? said it wanted the Financial Conduct Authority, the new regulator due in place later this year, to look at stopping unfair overdraft charges.

"While the Government has previously announced reforms to tackle

MONEY-GO-ROUND: Which? found differences in banks' overdraft costs unfair overdraft charges, they simply don't go far enough," said Which? chief executive Peter Vicary-Smith.

"It's extremely disappointing to find that bank charges are still too high, too complex and impossible to compare. It's essential the Government gives the new financial regulator the powers to limit these charges and to challenge their complexity.

"We want to see the new regulator put consumer protection at the heart of everything it does. The regulator must be a strong, open and proactive watchdog that stands up to the banks, not a lapdog."

The British Bankers' Association, the industry's trade body, made the point that unauthorised charges would not be applied to any accounts kept in credit or within agreed overdraft limits.

"Most customers don't go into an unauthorised overdraft," a spokesman said. "Those who do so regularly should consider asking for an overdraft limit or review the way they operate their account.

"Whichever way you operate your account it's important to shop around for the best deal that suits you. The major banks all provide six common charging scenarios on their websites to allow customers to see what charges they may incur if they were customers of that bank. They can then compare the relative costs between different banks."

The Which? research found that many banks used expensive daily fees. RBS charged £6 a day, equivalent to annual interest of 2,190pc, on a £100 unauthorised overdraft. This is the sort of rate charged by payday loan companies that made the headlines in the run-up to Christmas.

The BBA spokesman said: "The major banks recently announced a package of initiatives designed to introduce more transparency.

"These include text alerts if the account is getting close to an agreed limit; 'wiggle' room so that the customer won't be charged if they accidentally slip into the red by a small amount; and clearer information about when charges will be debited to the account and the point by which time during the day funds have to be paid into the account in order to avoid charges.

"Customers will also be able to opt out of overdraft facilities completely so that the account can't go overdrawn at all."

Take drop in interest rates with 'dose of caution'

HIGH street discounting in the run-up to Christmas has helped produce the biggest drop in inflation for nearly three years.

The consumer prices index (CPI) dropped to 4.2pc in December from 4.8pc the previous month, easing the pressure a little on spenders and savers, according to statistics published this week.

However, the rate still remains more than double the target of the Bank of England's monetary policy committee at a time when households continue to struggle thanks to high unemployment and stagnant wage growth.

"These figures are bang on prediction, but should be digested with a hearty dose of caution," said Tom Paterson, chief economist at Gold Made Simple.

"The economy is still in poor health and heavy discounting by retailers over Christmas and price cuts by the big energy companies will have distorted inflation in the short term.

"Also, it's worth remembering – above the sound of congratulatory back slapping – that inflation levels have now been above the government-mandated target of 2pc for the past two years.

"Whilst we could well see inflation tick lower for the next few months, with the possibility of energy companies cutting prices further and retailers extending their discounting beyond the January sales, the possibility that CPI will be anywhere near target a year from now, as confidently predicted by the Bank of England, is a fanciful one.

"The best we can hope for is that inflation sees a steady, but controlled decline over the next 12 months, ending the year at less painful levels."

According to Moneyfacts.co.uk, basic rate taxpayers still need to find savings accounts paying interest of 5.25pc a year just to enable their money to maintain its value after inflation and tax.

There are just eight standard savings accounts available at the moment that will allow these people to get real returns on their savings – and all of them are fixed-term Isas. There are no instant-access savings accounts that fit the bill.

Someone investing £10,000 five years ago would have the equivalent spending power of just £9,213 today, thanks to the corrosive effect of inflation over that period.

Chamber: 'HS2 can't come soon enough'

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE high-speed rail line leading to St Pancras station has transformed Kent – and the county will reap further benefits from the £33 billion plan to link London and Birmingham via a second fast-train route, according to Jo James, chief executive of Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce.

Plans for the scheme were approved by the Government after Transport Secretary Justine Greening faced down protests from her own party's MPs to announce the decision for High Speed 2.

The scheme involves trains in 2026 travelling at speeds of up to 250 mph – 110 mph faster than the regular operating speed of the Ashford to London service currently in operation. Journey times between London and Birmingham will be halved to 49 minutes.

Ms James said: "The high-speed line transformed Kent when it opened and businesses will benefit from this latest move as markets, customers and clients in the North and Midlands are brought closer by rail.

"Following the opening of the first high-speed line, Kent has become a much more attractive place for businesses to relocate to and the county has also retained many businesses that might have gone elsewhere.

"Everybody says London is just 37 minutes from Ashford, but the major benefit for us is that the centre of Kent is just 37 minutes from London.

"This has been borne out as I have seen more and more London firms coming here to do business with local companies. And when they arrive, for client meetings for instance, we have the chance to showcase ourselves.

"For instance – the lifestyle we can offer. Kent is a great place to live and work, and more and more people are discovering that. The new route will open up opportunities even further."

Ms James accepted that the new route was 14 years in the future but added: "The news that it is going ahead is fantastic. It cannot come quickly enough.

We need an excellent transport network in this country and Kent businesses will take advantage of that.

"It will be especially beneficial to our manufacturing industries. We have quite a lot of those and many do business across the country, so the new route will enable them to get their goods to customers much more quickly.

"Businesses in Kent and further afield will all benefit and the North-South divide will be greatly reduced."

"The sooner work starts, the sooner we will see the benefits."

Ms Greening announced that the network would be capable of transporting up to 26,000 passengers every hour.

High Speed 2 will link stations in London, Birmingham, Leeds, Manchester, Sheffield and the east Midlands, while high-speed trains will also connect other transport hubs such as Newcastle, Liverpool, York and Preston to link the east- and west-coast main lines.

KEEN: Jo James says that extended connectivity can only be a good thing

Ms Greening said: "HS2 will link some of our greatest cities – and high-speed trains will connect with our existing railway lines to provide seamless journeys to destinations far beyond."

She added that the decision to go ahead with the proposals was not one she had taken lightly and much of the line would be out of sight to avoid disruption to those affected by the route.

The line will be constructed in two phases, with a 140-mile route built between London and Birmingham by 2026 and further lines linking Birmingham to Leeds and Manchester finished by 2033.

The world's fastest train operates in China on the Shanghai to Nanjing and Hangzhou routes. It can reach 298mph and carry 494 passengers.

Extend fast route to coastal towns, blasts Gale

MP Sir Roger Gale has called on Prime Minister David Cameron to extend the high-speed railway line across Kent.

Currently, services run at full operating speed to Ashford, but further on down the line they slow down considerably due to the infrastructure being unable to cope with the faster trains.

The Thanet North MP said such a move would be of vast benefit to the economy in the east of the county and to commuters.

Speaking during Prime Minister's Questions following the announcement of the £33 billion High Speed 2 route from London to Birmingham, the Kent MP said: "In congratulating the Government in its courageous decision to pursue High Speed 2, can I ask him [Mr Cameron] to turn his attention to unfinished business left by the last government?

TO THE LETTER: Sir Roger Gale MP wrote to the Prime Minister about a longer link

"High Speed 1 services only run from St Pancras to Ashford. Could he ask it to drive through services to Thanet, so we can see the sort of benefits that will be enjoyed by Birmingham?"

Mr Cameron replied: "I will look at what he says.

"High Speed 1 is an advert for what you can get from linking up the country with high-speed rail services, shortening commuter distances and helping change the economic geography of the country so we can build a stronger economy."

The Kent MP says he then wrote to Mr Cameron to further explain his view.

He told Archant KOS Media: "Effectively the high-speed service stops at Ashford for five minutes and then trundles on through the rest of Kent.

"I wrote to the Prime Minister to explain the problem is that while the train is fast and a good service to and from Ashford and St Pancras it is not so good for other parts of the county.

"Services to Charing Cross and Victoria now take longer as they stop more frequently and have to be timed to accommodate the new high-speed trains.

"Not too many people work around the St Pancras area – they work in the West End or Westminster, or around Victoria. So if they do use the high-speed service they have to cope with a Tube journey lasting at least 20 minutes – and of course the added expense. But this could be offset by extending the fast line.

"What I would like to see is a service which runs from the capital to a Thanet Parkway station, stopping at Ashford and Canterbury, forgetting Ebbsfleet and looking at how convenient it is for commuters to use Stratford before a decision is made on whether to stop there.

"The journey time should be an hour. I am probably one of the few people alive who has travelled in 60 minutes from London Victoria to Ramsgate. It was a special train, so it was a little bit of a cheat, but it shows it can be done.

"And that was a slam-door train on existing lines – clockwork, really.

"There would have to be upgrades of the line to allow the high-speed service to be extended as well as improvements in signalling, bridges and level crossings.

"That would cost money, but I feel any outlay would be very small in comparison with the benefits to the economy of east Kent."

The Kent MP said beneficiaries of such a project would include Manston airport and the Enterprise Zone that has been created near Sandwich in the wake of Pfizer's staff cuts.

HONOUR

OBE for work with service personnel

DAVID Ashman, partnership chairman at Reeves, one of Kent's leading accountancy and business advisory firms, has been awarded an OBE in the Queen's New Year's Honours list.

He was recognised for his voluntary service to the Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen and Families Association (SSAFA) Forces Help.

The association was founded in 1885 and is the UK's oldest national military charity. It provides financial, practical and emotional assistance to current or former serving men and women from the Army, Navy and RAF and their families. SSAFA supports some 50,000 people each year with issues such as welfare, housing, health and social working, adoption and mentoring, among others.

Mr Ashman is national honorary treasurer of SSAFA, having worked with the Kent branch for over 22 years as branch treasurer. He became a trustee of the charity nine years ago and has been national honorary treasurer for the past three years. He has been awarded an OBE for his voluntary service to SSAFA.

He is also one of Reeves' charity and not-for-profit sector specialists.

On receiving this award, he said: "I am absolutely delighted to be recognised with this honour and for being part of such a deserving charity."

"The work SSAFA does is amazing and really makes a difference to people's lives. It is a privilege to support the volunteers who do so much to assist serving and ex-service men, women and their families who are in need."

Clive Stevens, managing partner at Reeves, based in Canterbury and Chatham, said: "I am delighted that David should receive this as it is extremely well deserved for the amount of time, effort and expertise David has given."

Confidence is waning as firms fear drop in domestic demand

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

FEARS of weakening prospects across the commercial world have knocked business confidence in Kent back to a two-and-a-half year low, according to the latest Business in Britain report from Lloyds TSB Commercial.

Firms remain particularly worried about the outlook for demand in domestic markets, the Eurozone and outside Europe, and are continuing to rein in recruitment and investment spending as a result.

The twice-yearly report, which canvasses the views of 294 Kent, East and West Sussex, Surrey, Hampshire and Dorset firms, shows business confidence has fallen to its lowest level since mid-2009, when the economy was starting to emerge from recession.

Paul Spencer, regional director for Lloyds TSB Commercial, said: "Export markets outside Europe will be the key to growth in what will undeniably be a tough start to the year."

"It is understandable that businesses are keeping the brakes on investment, given the volatile economic climate, but to break the cycle of dwindling confidence leading to slower growth, it is crucial firms do whatever they can to maximise opportunities, at home or overseas."

"Although export markets are strained, there are still opportunities for growth in countries outside Europe for those Kent businesses in a position to seize them. For our part, we are doing all we can to help businesses shape up to make the most of openings in these markets."

The Business in Britain confidence index tracks Kent businesses' views of likely sales, orders and profits for the coming six months and presents the overall 'balance' of opinion, weighing up the percentage of firms that are positive in outlook against those that are negative.

The overall confidence balance is the average of the individual balances, for sales (16 per cent), orders (15 per cent) and profits (-4 per cent) and has fallen to 9 per cent in the region from a balance of 17 per cent in July. This is broadly

FEELING THE FEAR:

Businesses are holding back on investment amid fears for a drop in homegrown sales, which could hit the stability of their businesses similar to the national confidence balance of 8 per cent.

The issue weighing most heavily on the minds of businesses in Kent is faltering domestic demand. Almost three-fifths (56 per cent) of firms say they are more worried about weak markets at home than by any other potential threat to their business – a rise from 49 per cent.

However, businesses in the region are also increasingly concerned about overseas demand. More than a third (34 per cent) expect to grow their total exports during the first half of the year, but 16 per cent are braced for a fall, resulting in a balance of 18 per cent expecting exports to rise. This has slipped 29 per cent.

The decline in export prospects reflects weaker European demand. Eleven per cent of businesses expect exports to Europe to improve in the first half of the year, while 19 per cent anticipate weaker demand. The resulting balance of -8 per cent is weaker than the previous 31 per cent. The balance for exports to the rest of the world, at 18 per cent, also fell from 37 per cent.

Kent firms' uncertainties about the economic outlook are continuing to affect their investment intentions. Almost a fifth (18 per cent) say they plan to boost investment over the next six months, but 22 per cent plan to reduce it. The resulting negative balance of -4 per cent is 2 per cent lower than in July. Just over half (51 per cent) of companies say they plan to keep investment levels unchanged.

A similar picture emerges for recruitment. Almost a fifth (16 per cent) of Kent businesses say they intend to increase staff numbers during the first half of 2012, while 13 per cent are planning cuts. The result is a positive balance of 3 per cent, the same as July. The majority of the region's businesses (68 per cent) expect to keep staffing levels as they are.

Trevor Williams, Lloyds Bank Corporate Markets chief economist, said: "This latest survey suggests we could see a period of zero to slightly negative growth in the first six months of the year. The outlook further out will depend partly on whether sufficient progress can be made to resolve the euro crisis and whether businesses act to seize opportunities to invest and grow."

New chapter for telephony firm set to more than double in size

A TELEPHONE answering service-provider has trebled its office space at Kent Science Park.

GoResponse invested more than £100,000 in expanding and upgrading its headquarters, a move that has seen its 50-seat call centre capacity increased to 130.

The telephony firm, which started out with four members of staff in 2003, now employs 95 people and has the potential to take the number of names on the payroll up to 230.

Mark Kirby, managing director at GoResponse, said he was delighted with their expanded facilities.

"This is a new chapter for us," he said. "This expansion gave us the opportunity to create an environment unparalleled in the marketplace and a chance to redevelop how we provide our services."

"I'd like to thank Kent Science Park for their help. With their assistance we've grown from a four-man start-up to a company that employs nearly 100 people and has a turnover of £2.3 million. We're sure this growth will continue into 2012 and beyond."

James Speck, site director at Kent Science Park, said: "GoResponse is the latest of our tenants to take additional space at the park, having outgrown its original offices."

"Between us, and in difficult trading times, we have developed a different and very open landlord-and-tenant relationship, focusing on how to deliver value-for-money bespoke business space to GoResponse and our other growing tenants and, more importantly, making employment at KSP attractive."

Accountants make warren clearance their business

SAPLINGS planted in Boxley have been cleared of weeds and undergrowth, thanks to workers from the Maidstone branch of DSH Chartered Accountants and Business Advisors.

The eight-strong DSH green team helped clear the area around recently-planted box trees at Boxley Warren, helping them to become better established and thrive.

The new trees, which are only a few years old, were at risk of being crowded out by faster-growing plants.

Mike Philips, Mid Kent Downs projects officer, said: "I would like to thank the DSH team for giving up their time to help us in our work to encourage the new box trees to grow."

"In the past, box trees were very common in Boxley and gave the area its name. However, lack of woodland management, intensive farming, vandalism and neglect saw their numbers plummet to the point that there were only a few left.

"With the help of volunteers such as these, we are confident Boxley Warren will soon once again be home to several hundred established box trees."

Rosie Croucher, trainee accountant, said: "We were tasked with lopping, which was not as easy as we hoped, to clear space around the box trees."

"During the day we cleared three different sites around the warren, all of which were situated high up on steep slopes and made me realise I may not fit the definition of an 'averagely fit' person."

"It was a good day, despite being hard work. It is nice to know that we have benefited the environment around us, protecting the natural habitat in the warren."

Tobacco plant research in bid to combat HIV

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

SCIENTISTS on a quest to provide low-cost drugs to restrict the spread of HIV are working with plant specialists at East Malling Research (EMR) to find a solution.

The horticultural researchers are now successfully growing genetically-modified tobacco plants that exude a potentially life-saving drug through their roots. It is the first experimental set-up of its kind undertaken in Europe.

The EMR team, led by Dr Chris Atkinson, and Professor Julian Ma, of St George's, University of London, are seeking ways to use plants to produce large quantities of a drug known to block HIV infection.

Following the first year of trials with tobacco plants at EMR, Prof Ma is optimistic that the new techniques will enable effective HIV drugs and preventative medicines to be produced in plants where they are needed and in sufficient quantities to be available to millions of people in the next five years.

The plant-growing technologies being developed by EMR also raise the possibility of plants producing other drugs rapidly and in large quantities to counter serious pandemics.

In EMR's drug-production experiments, tobacco plants been transformed to produce a protein called cyanovirin-N, which research shows prevents HIV from binding to human cells. EMR is developing ways to grow the plants hydroponically in the research centre's secure containment facility, the UniGro 'GroDome'.

The dome's control and design sophistication allows carbon dioxide to be elevated, along with light levels and optimal temperatures, all of which can improve the rate of plant growth.

These factors are also being used scientifically to manipulate the way the plant produces the protein in the roots and show how specifically to maximise root growth.

EMR scientists are also developing procedures to promote the release of the cyanovirin protein into the hydroponic nutrient solution in which the plants are growing.

Being able to collect the protein from the nutrient solution flowing over the roots enables its extraction and purification to be much simpler than taking it from the leaves. It should also be much cheaper to extract from this solution.

The growth potential of the plants is monitored closely and manipulated to optimise the concentration of cyanovirin production.

Additionally, the facility also enables the tobacco plants to be propagated so that once the initial transformation has been achieved thousands of seeds containing the lifesaving drug can be produced.

Dr Atkinson, deputy chief executive at EMR, said: "This is a groundbreaking and globally-significant piece of research with huge potential.

"Tobacco is an ideal non-food crop for this, thanks to the speed it grows and matures and our deep knowledge of its physiology and transformability, which has been the focus of scientific attention for more than 20 years."

Prof Ma and EMR's work is a three-year investigation funded by the National Institutes Of Health, the US national medical research funding agency.

Cyanovirin is a protein produced by a cyanobacterium that occurs naturally in the blue-green algae found in a wide range of natural environments but possibly most known from being visible in large blooms across fresh water.

Prof Ma believes that one of the first uses for cyanovirin produced by tobacco plants will be in combination with two other HIV prevention drugs as a cream or gel for women to use to prevent infection during sexual intercourse.

"A combination of drugs is important because the HIV virus, as with many viruses, can mutate rapidly," he said.

"Once we have perfected the technology for producing cyanovirin and delivered successful clinical trials, growing these plants around the world will be relatively simple."

ENVIRONMENT

Port's efforts win green recognition

THE Port of Dover has outperformed all other UK ports in a Government scheme.

This is the first mandatory scheme aimed at improving energy efficiency and cutting emissions in large public- and private-sector companies in the UK, and the port achieved a place in the top 3 per cent of the 2,000-plus organisations that participated.

The Carbon Reduction Commitment Energy Efficiency Scheme (CRC) requires organisations using more than 6,000 MWh of electricity each year to measure and report on their carbon emissions.

Published by the Environment Agency, scores are based on the percentage of the company's emissions that are covered by a good energy-management accreditation and the installation of smart-meters to give detailed information on energy use.

With a weighted score of 2,092.50, 22 companies were ranked joint first; however, the port was not far behind with a weighted score of 2,040. The lowest score achieved was 402 and the average 1,052.

Bob Goldfield, port chief executive, said: "We are delighted that as one of the world's busiest ports we have achieved such a high ranking in this prestigious league table, confirming our ongoing commitment to excelling in environmental management."

Hundreds sign up for on-the-job training with apprentice scheme

CANTERBURY College has announced record numbers of young people joining its apprenticeship training programmes.

More young people than ever before have signed up to Canterbury College's 39 apprenticeship courses, which include mechanical engineering, health and social care, childcare, accounting and dental nursing.

The college now has more than 450 apprentices, with the expectation of boosting this to more than 500 as the year progresses.

Mark Hill, director of business development, said: "The work we have done to engage employers and raise the profile of our apprenticeships is clearly paying dividends.

"These are a great investment for employers and are highly valued by many businesses as our great results prove. Our apprentices are among the most successful in Kent and a credit to the college."

Canterbury College is set to benefit from the Government's pledge of extra funding for apprenticeships when it launches its youth contract in April 2012.

The extra money will allow the college to add to its already-extensive range of apprenticeship courses. It will also give employers more contributions towards apprentices' wages.

Through apprenticeships, young people gain on-the-job training alongside studying for qualifications. Depending on the type of role, apprenticeships usually last between one and two years and give young people a firm footing within a company; some can also lead to a degree-level qualification.

The college's Canterbury Training and Recruitment (CTR) service plays a big role in getting young people into work.

CTR provides a bridge between students and businesses by advertising job vacancies, short-listing candidates, conducting initial interviews and arranging employer interviews. It also teaches students about working life and gives them employability training.

New courses include baking cakes, an introduction to bee-keeping, beginners' Latin and Punjabi, plus baby signing.

Cllr Howard Doe, portfolio holder for community services, said: "These courses are all part-time so busy residents can fit them in around other commitments."

"Our courses offer learners the chance to enjoy some quality 'me' time, meet friends and learn new skills that could lead to a new hobby, career or business venture."

"If you've never tried adult education before, now's your chance."

Between January and July, MACLS will be running more than 340 courses.

Courses start throughout the year and learners can enrol at any time.

Most courses offer concessionary rates and for those out of work or on benefits, some of them are free.

New courses are added to the online course finder every month at the request of students. For more details and to search for more courses visit www.medway.gov.uk/adultlearning or phone 338400.

30 apprenticeships on offer for youngsters

AN accredited training provider has the perfect 2012 start for unemployed teenagers and building firms across Kent: 30 funded apprenticeships.

"New Year is a time when we all think about new opportunities, so it's fantastic to be able to offer 30 youngsters who might otherwise be facing a bleak 2012 the chance to learn a skill for life – especially at a time when youth unemployment is continuing to grow," said Peter Samuel, director of SWAY UK, a specialist Construction Skills (Cskills) accredited training provider.

"Plus we can offer 30 small firms who are struggling to find their business a chance to take on appliances and tiling.

Throughout their apprenticeship the youngsters will receive wages of £75 a week minimum.

"We're looking for students aged 16-18, ideally with maths and English GCSE minimum grades D-G, but technical ability, a hunger to learn and a professional attitude are essential," said Oscar.

Employers interested in taking on an apprentice need to be able to provide work that will cover the qualification requirements.

"The grant we have secured enables us partially to fund the student's placement, meaning employers can benefit from an enthusiastic trainee from as little as £2.60 an hour," explained Oscar.

a carefully selected trainee at minimal cost with full support from us."

The openings are part of the first tranche of apprenticeships announced by the Department of Business, Innovation and Skills in November.

"It's a win-win-win situation," said fellow director Kelly Oscar.

"The students get structured, quality training. The employers get an enthusiastic new recruit."

"And we have the delight of seeing youngsters grow in knowledge and confidence."

The students will work towards a Level 2 Diploma in fitted interiors and will learn key skills for installing kitchens and bathrooms, including plumbing, soldering, installing

Successful applicants will receive up to six weeks' pre-apprenticeship training with SWAY UK at its centre in Bromley before being matched to a suitable employer.

For the remaining nine-12 months of the programme the apprentices' weeks will be split – with two days' training at SWAY UK and three days on-the-job learning with their employer.

Smart thinking needed for new schools' computing curriculum

CHANGING the way ICT is taught in schools would be a "smart move" according to Kent County Council's education chief.

Pupils are currently "bored out of their minds" by the subject, according to Secretary of State for Education, Michael Gove, who has launched a consultation on a new computing curriculum.

KCC cabinet member for education, learning and skills, Cllr Mike Whiting, said: "Technology has moved on dramatically but the pace of ICT lessons has not. This is great news for young people who quite frankly know how to use computers having grown up with them all their lives.

"Focusing on computer science and programming is a smart move and would open up all kinds of possibilities. Imagine if the next Angry Birds gaming phenomenon was created by a Kent student after learning programming skills at school.

"With the internet and smart phones being part of our everyday lives, there are many opportunities for a long-term, rewarding career in this sector."

A 2011 survey by the Office for National Statistics revealed that 77 per cent of British households have internet access – up 20 per cent on 2006.

Six million people also accessed the internet over their mobile phone for the first time between September, 2010, and August, 2011.

College's students beat the blues with Monday fun

STUDENTS and staff at Canterbury College spread the happiness when they led a national campaign to beat this week's 'Blue Monday'.

The college hosted a series of events to combat the effects of what is termed the most depressing day of the year. There was magic, music, free food, a special chill-out zone, and more at the New Dover Road campus.

The event was run by the college's students' union. Its manager Tony Payne said: "The campaign is about changing the perception of a day seen as the most depressing date of the year. By holding events we gave people a reason to be cheerful.

"It's a great cause which aims to put a smile on people's faces at time when they really need it. It's a fun event for the students to get involved with, and one which reaches out to the wider community as well."

Students and staff enjoyed blue candy floss in exchange for posting positive messages on a communal wall. They were also treated to free cakes, all keeping with the blue theme. Magician

MAGIC MAN: Dazzling Darren performed tricks

Dazzling Darren was on hand to impress onlookers with a series of illusions including seemingly cutting off his own arm, and some students also took part in a question and answer session with Jeremy Gilley, founder of the ceasefire charity Peace One Day, via video link.

Students were keen to spread the message. Ray Thompson, 18, a Level 3 BTEC performing arts student, said: "It seems to have created a positive atmosphere and it seems to be spreading. I think the message behind the campaign is great."

Toby Esty, 17, who is studying a Level 3 BTEC in music technology, said: "It's a good cause and giving out free cakes and candy floss seems to be a good way of spreading the message."

"I'm planning on doing my part and helping someone out."

Fashion graduate is toast of the catwalk as she heads to Paris show

A graduate from the University for the Creative Arts (UCA) at Rochester has won an international fashion competition.

Lyudmila Lane, who graduated from BA (Hons) fashion design in July, 2011, beat entries from more than 50 colleges worldwide to win the Who's Next/Arts Thread Fashion Graduate Competition 2011.

As one of 10 winners, Lyudmila has won the opportunity to showcase her collection at the world-famous Who's Next Prêt-à-Porter trade show in Paris next week.

Lyudmila, who was a Gold Award finalist at London's Graduate Fashion Week (GFW) in 2011, said: "As a new designer hoping to enter the professional world of fashion, exhibiting my collection at Who's Next Prêt-à-Porter is a once-in-a-lifetime chance for me."

"The opportunity to show my creations to the public and meet influential fashion buyers from around the world is an amazing chance for me to establish my own label.

"Winning has given me a huge boost in both energy and aspiration – it's a huge step for my career and my dream of seeing people wearing my clothes out on the streets."

"I feel ready to go out and achieve my goals thanks to the support and guidance of the teaching staff at UCA who have given me the opportunity to uncover and expose my creative abilities."

THE INTERVIEW

Brigitte Orasinski

A LEGACY of the Folkestone Triennial arts festival exploring some of the legends, anecdotes, mysteries and characters of the town and its surrounding area is currently the best-seller in the local branch of Waterstones.

Artistic and cultural group Strange Cargo is behind Everywhere Means Something To Someone: The People's Guidebook To Folkestone, which explores some of the lesser-known facets of the town.

The book's creators hope it will build on Folkestone's growing reputation as a centre for the arts as events such as the Triennial and book festival attract more visitors.

It contains details of John Logie Baird and the birth of television, prehistoric holy wells, forgotten tram tracks, military memories, ghosts, film stars and even recipes, as well as well-known landmarks such as the harbour and visitor attractions like the Romney, Hythe and Dymchurch Railway.

Brigitte Orasinski is artistic director of Strange Cargo. She said: "The theme of the Folkestone Triennial last year was A Million Miles From Home, but we are at home.

"We are based in Folkestone, so we wanted to celebrate our town and its people."

The book, which was put together with contributions from many residents, features 260 stories with images.

It features text in Nepalese as well as English to enable members of the Gurkha community to gain a greater understanding of a town that has fully adopted them and their culture.

Plaques have been put up at 200 of the featured locations.

"The idea was to get beneath the skin of Folkestone," said Orasinski. "Visitors to the town usually just scratch the surface, especially if they only come for a day.

"The book is like being shown around Folkestone by a friend with a great deal of knowledge about its history, traditions and people. There is something featured which will appeal to all age ranges and interests.

"Obviously, places such as The Leas, the coastal park and the harbour are featured, but there are also bus routes and poems. Someone who searches out the sites will find themselves in unusual parts of the town, off the more usually trodden paths. So they can also make discoveries for themselves."

Among the unusual stories recounted are details of old walled gardens that can just be recognised amid the brambles beyond the East Cliff. The original buildings were reduced to

A Kent town far away

The exotic is often a lot closer than you think, discovers Nick Ames

SHARED STORIES: Brigitte Orasinski wants people to take note of the fascinating places nearby and their tales, such as the Holy Well rubble by either wartime bombing or a cliff fall and are now home to a scarce species of lizard.

The holiday residence of Queen Victoria, the Royal Pavilion Hotel, which can be found behind the Burstin, is also featured, as are strange ship-shaped objects on the seashore and the remains of trenches used to train soldiers heading for France in the First World War.

A poignant reminder of an air raid in the same conflict is also detailed as a plaque tells of May 25, 1917, when on a busy bank-holiday weekend German Gotha aircraft dropped bombs on the street, killing 60 people instantly, with many others dying later from their injuries. Land once occupied by the devastated shop buildings in Tontine Street has never been built on since, in memorial to those who died.

Then there is the bus shelter in Seabrook that was used as a location for shots of Michael Caine in the 2007 psychological thriller Is Anybody There? and memories of seaside adventures underneath the arches that run along the sands.

Orasinski said: "I have many favourite stories I encountered in working on this project. One was of a man now in his 70s who worked on the sea defences around the Mermaid café. He cemented a farthing into the concrete, but it later fell out. However, you can still see the circle it made. The stories are a unique way to tap into other people's memories.

"As a contrast, there are details from the James Bond film A View To A Kill, which had a scene shot on the Warren, involving Grace Jones's character May Day, a bomb and a plot to blow up Silicon Valley."

Writer and broadcaster Dea Birkett, who used to live in Folkestone, introduces the book and includes her personal memories of the town.

She states: "At last – a book about real travelling. Going on a journey isn't about clocking up the miles, but adopting a state of mind. It's about looking very, very carefully. That is what this wonderful collection of moments forces you to do – see Folkestone afresh.

"Travel is always as much about another time as another place, and it's startling how many of the contributions are about memories of what was there, rather than records of what is. We all long to time-travel – back to our youth, in our grandfather's footsteps, or simply to a place we believe was better than today. This book takes you to that magical lost land, reminding us of what once was.

"When I now give talks about travel-writing around the country, I ask the audience if they've ever been to India. Often half the well-travelled crowd raise their hands. Then I ask how many have been to Folkestone. Sometimes, someone has. I do this to prove that places that appear most ordinary are sometimes the least known.

"Folkestone, for most people, is a more far-away place than Goa."

■ Everywhere Means Something To Someone: The People's Guidebook To Folkestone is priced at £5 and available from Waterstone's in Folkestone or the Strange Cargo office in the high street.

NEW YEAR

Don't run from resolutions

THE fat lady has well and truly sung her last note, the turkey sandwiches are just a distant memory and New Year's Eve was a wash-out... just like most years.

We are already three weeks into those brand-new desk calendars that give us a shiny new phrase for the day. Tomorrow, perhaps it should say 'Don't Quit!'.

It is almost a certainty that the majority of those of us who actually believe in making a New Year's Resolution or three have already cast them aside like the cream corduroy trousers your nan gave you on that disappointing day in December.

Whether it is the idea of going for a run every day after work only to be confronted with hail and freezing temperatures or the never-ending last packet of cigarettes, our resolutions usually start to wane about now.

But don't let it happen! Forgo that last celebration in the box... leave it for the youngsters and their over-capable metabolism.

Pull on those trainers and accept that you will get wet if you leave the house for a jog.

Take more notice of the healthy food in the supermarket and the eat-yourself-thin articles – there are certainly enough of them out there for every living being.

Banishing the booze, the cigarettes, the pork scratchings, along with the cutting back on all those other guilty pleasures... it will come with time, don't worry.

The most important thing is to know in your own mind that you want to make a change to your life-style because at the end of the day it is your choice, your decision. Stick by that and you won't go far wrong.

And if that fails, well, there's always tomorrow to start all over again.

ADVERTISERS ANNOUNCEMENT

Why New Year resolutions are so hard to keep

Why is it that every New Year we start off with such good intentions, only to find they have melted away before the end of January?

The reason, according to Gravesend Hypnotherapist, Rob Woodgate, is simple - we just don't feel like changing.

"Many people have an inner conflict between their thoughts and feelings, especially when it comes to New Year resolutions", says Rob. "For example, you might resolve to lose weight but find it difficult feel excited about exercise. The problem is that the feeling part of us is much stronger than the thinking part, so we'll always end up doing what we feel like doing."

Hypnotherapy allows you to resolve these inner conflicts - to stop that 'Angel and Devil' fighting - so that it becomes so much easier to achieve your goals.

For information on how hypnotherapy can help you make your New Year resolutions work this time, please visit North Kent Hypnotherapy at www.northkenthypnotherapy.com or call Rob Woodgate on 01474 740724.

No bull from last-minute choice, just good food at an affordable price...

EVEN in January, with everyone recovering from the Christmas spending spree, it's not an easy thing to find a last-minute place to eat on a Saturday night. So, after failing with a few town-centre restaurants, I visited a haunt with which I'm more familiar on Sunday lunchtimes – The Bull on Penenden Heath.

A large pub on the outskirts of Maidstone, the venue has all the charm of a local with none of the awkwardness of feeling like you've intruded on a private gathering.

The menu is traditional pub fare, with lots of burgers and other favourites, so it felt only right that I go for prawn cocktail (£3.95) to start.

Expecting the usual paltry lettuce leaf and tiny shrimps, I was pleased to be given large juicy prawns, draped in just the right amount of sauce and accompanied by a decent side salad and soft, seeded bread.

Add a few potatoes and this large serving could easily have become a main course.

My guest's starter of Old Speckled Hen rarebit-stuffed mushroom (£3.75) was significantly smaller in comparison, but the delicious flavour of the ale-infused rarebit ensured she was as satisfied as me.

For the main I had the misfortune to choose the one dish that happened to be off the menu – pan-fried salmon – so I made a snap choice to go for sweet potato, apricot, chickpea and red-pepper kebabs with couscous, flatbread, cucumber and yoghurt (£7.75).

RESTAURANT REVIEW

There was nothing particularly exciting about it, but for a vaguely healthy alternative to pub grub it was a good meal.

Unfortunately, however, having tried a mouthful of my guest's hand-battered halloumi (£7.45), I realised I'd made the wrong choice.

Served with chunky chips and a colourful side salad, this was so delightful a dish that my guest had cleared her plate before I was able to steal another bite...

We shared dessert – a pub pudding board that at £6.75 was twice the price of the other options, but we knew we had hit the jackpot when three full-sized desserts arrived, complete with a choice of custard, cream or ice-cream.

We started with the dark chocolate and walnut brownie with chocolate sauce, which I soon claimed as my own. This large serving was simply heaven for chocolate-lovers.

In contrast, the white chocolate and pistachio cheesecake was barely touched, leaving us to move on to the sticky toffee and date pudding, which we devoured in minutes.

It may not be a Saturday-night dining venue, but I'd have no problem returning to The Bull the next time I don't feel like cooking...

Especially when you throw in a few drinks and discover that, thanks to some handy money-saving offers, the bill for a three-course meal comes to a mere £37.60.

Gastro pub it's not, but sometimes all you need is good simple food that's close to home.

The company has experience of sound-producing for bands such as Aerosmith, Black Sabbath, Motley Crue and The Who during their world tours, so the night should rock. Acts appearing on the night will be indie bands The Slydigs and The Craven Braves, with support from DJs Ed Wilder with Bonnie & Carly, who will take the music into the night. ## HOMES

Last chance to save before stamp-duty holiday ends

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

TIME is running out for first-time homebuyers to take advantage of the Government's stamp-duty holiday, but Kent housebuilder Bovis Homes is offering to help them beat the deadline.

First-time buyers have been exempt from paying stamp duty on properties priced between £125,000-£250,000 since the budget of 2010, but this will finish after Saturday, March 24.

From then, anyone who takes ownership (ie legally completes) on these homes will have to pay 1 per cent of the purchase price in stamp duty tax.

Bovis Homes says it has quality properties available in this price range at Chestnut Place in Ashford, Abbey Place in Minster and Meadowbank at Great Easthall Farm in Sittingbourne.

"The holiday is almost over – but there could still be time for homebuyers to make the most of it if they buy a brand-new Bovis Home," said group marketing director Kevin Wilkins.

"That 1 per cent could be a significant extra cost for the buyer – up to £2,500 in some cases – so there is a real saving to be made by completing your house purchase before the deadline.

"However, the danger is that first-time buyers may fail to appreciate how long the homebuying process could take and they may leave it too late in the new year to make the most of this benefit.

"The advantage of buying new is the buyer

DREAM START: Buying new could save you cash

has a far greater chance of making the deadline and achieving the stamp-duty saving.

"You will avoid getting stuck in a dreaded chain, which can always cause unexpected delays, and the buyer will be kept informed about the timescales involved in buying their home.

"With our selection of low-deposit purchase-assistance schemes, the first-time buyer could be freed up to make their move quickly, without having to wait to save up for a large deposit."

Those assistance schemes include FirstBuy – a scheme where a joint 20 per cent equity loan from the Government and Bovis Homes means the buyer requires just a 5 per cent deposit and a 75 per cent loan-to-value mortgage.

Empty homes answer to problem of squatters?

OVER the last 18 months, Landlord Action, leader in helping landlords with problem tenants, has been instructed on a growing number of squatting cases fuelled by the huge proportion of properties sitting empty across the UK.

After the broadcast of Channel 4's The Great British Property Scandal highlighting the gravity of this problem, Paul Shamplina, founder of Landlord Action, supports the challenge to get more empty properties back into use as he believes this will reduce the number of squatters taking up residence in private properties, which has a detrimental effect on homeowners and landlords.

According to Channel 4, 88 per cent of these empty properties are privately owned.

Shamplina said: "Many people don't have the funds to bring these properties back into use and it can cause huge aggravation, expense and stress for owners if squatters take up residence.

"To reduce this, councils need to do more by forming stronger links with private landlords to tackle the empty-homes crisis by creating viable alternatives so fewer people need to squat."

Aside from a few organised gangs who target properties to squat, the main reason that properties are squatted is because the majority engaging in it cannot afford rent.

IN STYLE:
The new Kia Optima boasts a 'must have' quality that's sure to draw in the buyers

Kia's optimum expectations

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

KIA'S newly-arrived Optima is well-named.

The Korean carmaker isn't always right on naming – I won't bore you with the acronym behind Ceed, Kia's Ford Focus rival – but there's no misplaced optimism here.

It's the first Kia to take the No1 sales spot at home and the brand has struggled to meet US demand – even with a production plant there.

Which explains why the Optima is late here and there are just 1,600 cars to sell in year one.

And these would sell on looks alone, though priced from £19,595 and carrying Kia's unique seven-year/100,000-mile warranty.

Kia says the Optima shows a shift from selling on value and rationality to selling on design, also highlighted by the latest Sportage SUV and Rio supermini.

It means Kia has achieved something fellow value brand Skoda took far longer to do: caused buyers to look beyond the badge.

The catalyst has been former Audi design wizard Peter Schreyer – the man behind the original TT. He has demanded that Kias need a 'must have' quality that the Optima has in spades, with muscular yet swooping lines and a coupe roofline that make it look good from any angle.

It also walks the talk on-road with good cornering and nimbleness for a relatively big car, without the hard ride that this can bring as a necessary evil.

But design doesn't always count in the hard fought 'D' or Mondeo sector though, where corporate users dominate, so the Optima needs old-style Kia rationality too.

For now, it will sell only with the 134bhp 1.7-litre diesel engine already used in the impressive Sportage, available with six-speed manual or auto gearboxes.

The manual's low emissions and average fuel consumption close to 60mpg will tempt company drivers, while fleet managers will note that it can be disposed of after three years with lots of warranty and, hopefully, mileage left.

Day to day the Optima should be as cossetting as models costing far more, since Kia hasn't lost sight of its value roots: standard spec is too lengthy to list here, but interior quality, an attractive well-arranged dashboard, and a superb 12-speaker Infinity brand Harman stereo stand out – the latter benefiting from the capacious cabin as much as any inmates. Oh, and there's a huge boot, too.

City car three sisters head for makeover

THREE'S no crowd when they get on as well as the Toyota Aygo, Peugeot 107 and Citroën C1.

The three city car clones – from an original design by Toyota – have been a big success story for the Japanese marque and its two French partners, generating much affection from owners since launch in 2005.

They set a new benchmark for style and practicality within a small on-road footprint, even offering three- or five-door formats, and have since gained an enviable reputation for a robustness that belies their compact dimensions.

However, with the small-car segment booming as motoring costs soar and low fuel consumption and emissions become crucial, there is plenty of competition, notably from VW's own three-part harmony group: its own Up! model plus the Skoda Citigo and Seat Mii, all arriving over the next few months.

First to hit back will be the Peugeot 107, arriving in February, with the revised Aygo in March and the C1 due in April.

Needless to say, while all will have had an individual cosmetic makeover inside and out, the big message is the same – tweaking of the standard-fit award-winning three-cylinder 67bhp 1.0-litre petrol engine means it is now exempt from road tax and the mpg can average in the mid-60s.

Look out, too, though, for enhanced interior quality plus gadget connectivity to please hardcore younger buyers who have taken to all three cars, not least because they are actually entertaining to drive despite their modest power.

Pricing has yet to be announced but, in the current UK market squeeze and with faltering consumer confidence, don't expect any of the three brands to stray much above their current £8,600 entry price.

UPDATE: The revised Toyota Aygo will arrive in March

There's no 'S Copa' from the charms of the Ibiza

By Sam Davison
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THERE could hardly be a better name for a Seat designed to appeal to the sporty Spanish marque's youngest buyers.

It's the Ibiza, after the island that stands for full-on holidays, clubbing and generally having a great time.

And with the current fourth generation Ibiza, Seat really hit the spot – the car has sharp styling, handling and pricing, plus practicality thrown in.

It's midway through its life now, having arrived in 2008, and a facelift version is due this spring, but the essence of its appeal will remain.

For a start, it's a capacious supermini, another of the 'supersize' generation that also spawned the latest Vauxhall Corsa, Peugeot 207 and Renault Clio models and leaving room for a future city car contender to slot in below it – the new Seat Mii baby car arrives later this year. While that will be an impressive lesson in space-efficiency it will make its big brother look positively enormous inside.

That upsized Ibiza cabin was a real winner when it arrived and also added a capacious boot, but if you needed yet more capacity, a swish ST or estate version was added to the range recently, priced from £14,260.

The hatchback line-up starts at just £9,995 though with the three-door SC. Like many carmakers, Seat turned the old stigma of the cheap and cheerful three-door model on its head and created a slightly different profile that makes it resemble an upmarket coupe version – without the extra price tag. But the smart money goes for the style with practicality of the five-door tested here in its cheapest guise, the 1.2-litre petrol powered S Copa.

To be fair, this engine might get you into the Ibiza style, but it doesn't have the club beat you

STYLISH: The Seat Ibiza is due for a revamp but you can't go far wrong with the current stylings of this car, with handling, pricing and the all-important look ticking the right boxes would welcome. Like many three-cylinder units it has an uneven tempo; the 70PS (68bhp) motor has been in the portfolio of Seat parent and German giant VW for some while and can be rowdy under pressure.

On the other hand, emissions are not terrible – you'll escape road tax altogether in year one and pay £95 a year thereafter – and it should average in the late 40s for mpg.

But acceleration is sluggish and you might consider two livelier four-cylinder petrol alternatives: there's an 85PS (83bhp) 1.4-litre or 105PS (103bhp) 1.2-litre turbocharged.

Then there are just as many diesels to choose from: including a 75PS (73bhp) 1.2-litre model wearing Seat's green Ecomotive label, and priced from £14,200. It will save you paying road tax and could average a starship 80mpg with careful driving.

But the same engine can be had for £13,550 without all the eco trickery and, frankly, if you don't cover huge mileages then why pay more?

The rest of the diesel card is filled by a 105PS (103bhp) 1.6-litre and 143PS (141bhp) 2.0-litre – the latter would appear to be overkill.

Seat has upgraded the standard Ibiza spec considerably of late, so our S Copa gets alloys, air con, electric front window and mirrors and other goodies with some affordable and tempting upgrades.

One of these is £300 for the electronic stability control, although you might wonder whether you need it since the Ibiza is such a sure-footed car, helped by a relatively long wheelbase and wide stance. That is the secret of the car's roominess, though the interior design still needs a spark to match the exterior lines.

It feels more robust than the previous generation though and maybe the forthcoming revamp will funk it up.

Toyota Yaris goes hybrid

TOYOTA has given a sneak preview of its new Yaris Hybrid supermini ahead of official unveiling at the Geneva Motor Show in March, before arriving in UK showrooms this summer.

It features a downsized petrol-electric hybrid system seen in the brand's Prius and Auris that still delivers a healthy 98bhp with both powerplants fully engaged.

New 'Ceeding' from cool Kia

TALKING of Geneva – Kia's all-new Ceed will make its debut at that show too, before going on sale here in June.

The current Ceed sparked the Korean marque's rise up the motor rankings, being both a confident and well-made tilt at Western models like the VW Golf and Ford Focus as well as introducing Kia's unique seven-year/100,000-mile warranty.

SUV Mokka surprise

VAUXHALL has caught some industry watchers by surprise by unveiling an all-new small SUV to be called the Mokka.

The compact yet chunky eye-catcher should arrive before the end of the year, offering 4x4 or front-wheel drive, but all with economical stop/start. It can also be fitted with Vauxhall's integrated rear bumper bike carrier.

Alfa stepping up the pace as sales soar

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

SPORTY Italian carmaker Alfa Romeo's share of the UK car market soared by almost 31 per cent in 2011.

The Fiat subsidiary also recorded its highest level of new-car registrations in Britain (11,563) since 2002.

This success was against a backdrop last year when motor manufacturers averaged a 4.4 per cent drop in market share.

But while the headline figures are clear-cut, Alfa says a whole range of factors played a part, including a much-improved and desirable product line-up, the brand's improved dealer network – which landed a top-10 positioning in the demanding JD Power UK customer satisfaction survey – and highly-competitive finance and incentives.

We can't argue that the compact three-door Alfa MiTo supermini (pictured) and stylish Alfa Giulietta five-door hatchback have attracted new customers, who see them as credible alternatives to mainstream German rivals.

They are also technically impressive with good powertrains, including the brand's powerful yet economical MultiAir engine technology, five-star maximum EuroNCAP safety ratings and Alfa Romeo's unique DNA driving system, which enables the driver to quickly select the best handling and engine format to suit conditions.

Alfa Romeo UK brand spokesman Damien Daly said: "We have two leading products on offer and have been able to win back customers who may have shied away from the brand in the past.

"However, it's not only the product that needs to be right. That's why we've worked tirelessly to improve our dealer network.

"In addition, both Giulietta and MiTo are available on competitive low finance rates, along with a free inclusive Alfa care package which includes three years' complimentary servicing.

"With the Alfa 4C [lightweight sports coupé] due next year, Alfa Romeo's future looks bright."

Bargain time as Skoda cuts VAT

SKODA is out to put January's high-street sales in the shade with a series of offers running until Saturday, March 31.

The first is an extension to the very successful no VAT or, cutting to the chase, 20 per cent off the list price.

The deal extends to selected petrol and diesel versions of the Fabia supermini, Octavia family car and Superb executive models (pictured) in both hatch and estate body styles. Some Roomster mini-MPV variants are also included.

Buyers can spread the cost of their new car over two years as well without paying a penny more, though this zero per cent finance deal applies only to certain models and is subject to a 50 per cent deposit.

Alternatively, buyers opting for Skoda's 7.9 per cent APR finance via a Personal Contract Plan (PCP) or Hire Purchase (HP) deal can qualify for free maintenance in the first three years or 30,000 miles of ownership. Again, this deal applies to certain models only but does include versions of the popular Yeti SUV/crossover.

Finally, the Czech marque has made a big price-cut on one of its most popular entry models to the brand: the Fabia 1.4 SE now sells for £8,995 – a whopping £3,000 discount.

All these offers come at a time when Skoda defied the doldrums across the UK car market in 2011, posting a record registration figure of more than 45,000 cars – the third year running the VW-owned brand has beaten its own record.

It has also become an established player in the fleet market, crashing through the 2 per cent barrier for the first time.

Credit for the surge across the board goes to the Yeti and Superb – Skoda's two most recent models and proof of the firm's ambition.

Both scored highly in Driving's road tests.

CUT: Claire Aitken missed out on the final round

Tour card hopes sunk by Aitken's bad round

AN AWFUL third round in final qualifying cost Claire Aitken any chance of reclaiming her card on the Ladies European Tour this season.

The Gravesend golfer headed to La Manga in southern Spain hoping to finish in the top 30 for the third time in four years.

Aitken was well on the way to achieving the feat after opening with rounds of 75 and 69 put her inside the top 20.

But disaster struck for the 25-year-old in Tuesday's third round. A torrid card included three double bogeys and six other dropped shots en route to a 12-over-par 85 on the south course which saw her plummet down the field.

Aitken improved in the fourth round on the resort's north course, but a four-over-par 75 was not good enough.

The 16-over-par total was seven shots shy of making the cut for Thursday's final round.

PROLIFIC: Kwesi Appiah's form attracted scouts

Appiah leaks transfer "deal" on Twitter

A MOVE to the Championship appears imminent for Kwesi Appiah despite the Margate striker prematurely announcing a transfer on Twitter this week.

The former Ebbsfleet and Peterborough United player has been in superb form since joining the Blues last summer, scoring 33 goals in all competitions.

Margate revealed last week several scouts from Premier League and Championship clubs were keeping tabs on the 21-year-old.

Appiah went one step further on Monday, when he tweeted: "Margate Have agreed deal with Blackpool. Going to meet the Gaffa later in the week. Exiting stuff" [sic].

It was news to Margate, who refused to comment beyond saying no deal had been completed. The tweet was hastily taken down, but Appiah's agent was quoted saying they had a meeting with Tangerines boss Ian Holloway.

AN OVERSEAS training camp looks on the cards as part of Kent's pre-season preparations in response to the earliest ever start to a cricket season.

The campaign is due to begin on April 5 with their opening LV= County Championship Division Two game against Yorkshire at Headingley, three days earlier than last season.

It means outdoor pre-season training needs to begin in early March, when there will be few guarantees of dry weather to prepare pitches for friendly games.

A wet build-up to last season saw Kent make a last minute decision to take 12 players and four staff to the ICC Global Cricket Academy in Dubai. The week-long trip was described by Paul Farbrace, the county's director of cricket, as a "no brainer" due to the amount of quality time players could accumulate in the much more predictable climate.

Nothing has been booked yet, but Jamie Clifford, Kent's chief executive, felt as long as a competitive package could be found there was a good chance new head coach Jimmy Adams would have an overseas camp to help prepare the players.

"There's a practical aspect which is that practice facilities and pitch preparation in March is very difficult," he said.

"We're looking at all the various options, if that means overseas then it means overseas.

"We've factored it into our financial plans for the year and I think you have to look at pound-for-pound investment, the time the players actually get practising rather than sitting and waiting for the rain to stop or being in the indoor school probably justifies an overseas pre-season trip.

"But it's got to be done at the right price, it can't just be wherever we fancy, it's got to represent value for money. This year with the early start it's looking very likely we'll have an overseas pre-season trip."

KENT'S LIVE TV GAMES 2012

sky SPORTS

KENT will have six games broadcast live on satellite television this summer after Sky Sports confirmed their schedule.

The first chance to watch Rob Key's men in action is the Clydesdale Bank 40 contest against Yorkshire on May 6. It is the only one of the six games not to be a day/night fixture.

Canterbury will host the cameras twice in June, against Warwickshire in the CB40 and the Friends Life t20 meeting with Middlesex. The latter will be preceded by a t20 international between England ladies and India ladies, which will also be live on TV.

■ Yorkshire v Kent (CB40)
Sunday, May 6 at Headingley
■ Kent v Warwickshire (CB40)
Friday, June 1 at Canterbury
■ Kent v Middlesex (t20)
Tuesday, June 26 at Canterbury
■ Derbyshire v Kent (CB40)
Tuesday, July 31 at Derby
■ Warwickshire v Kent (CB40)
Monday, August 13 at Edgbaston
■ Kent v Yorkshire (CB40)
Wednesday, August 22 at Canterbury

THE tricky balancing act of playing two different sports at a high level is over for Susie Rowe after the talented sportswoman was forced to give up playing hockey to focus on cricket.

Rowe had juggled the commitments needed to play top flight hockey with Canterbury ladies alongside featuring for Kent and England's women cricket sides.

It was a rare feat, but the dual role was ended when the England cricket management adopted a new policy on extra curricular sporting commitments.

Ahead of a demanding schedule which sees England preparing for and playing in both the Twenty20 and One Day world cups in the next 12 months, it was felt the squad could not afford to risk injury playing other sports.

It means Rowe will not be in the Canterbury side which resumes the outdoor season against Clifton next month.

She said: "You can't afford to put your body under any extra risk. I would hate to miss out on a tour because I was injured playing hockey. It's a big sacrifice because hockey's a massive part of my life, but the aim is to make it worthwhile. I'm 100 per cent committed to my cricket."

"It wasn't an individual decision, it was a team decision made by the management. It was out of my hands, which was probably a good thing. It's what had to be done and I fully understand it - it's just a great shame that it has happened."

Instead Rowe will head to New Zealand next month for a tour which features five Twenty20 games and three One Day Internationals.

She joined up with the rest of the international squad, which includes four other Kent players - captain Charlotte Edwards, Lydia Greenway, Laura Marsh and Tamsin Beaumont - at Edgbaston this week as preparations for the trip began in earnest.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS V ST IVES TOWN:
Kick-off 3pm Saturday at Culverden Stadium

Culverden primed for big gate at Vase showdown

By Fred Atkins

sports@kosmedia.co.uk

THE biggest game in Tunbridge Wells' recent history takes place at Culverden on Saturday with the visit of St Ives Town in the fourth round of the FA Vase.

Manager Martin Larkin believes the crowd, likely to be swelled by a hefty travelling contingent, could top the 500 mark for the first time in a number of years.

Putting on a good show is seen to be vital to increase the club's fan base.

"A lot of our fans watched their first match in the FA Vase, so we've got to give the occasion a certain amount of respect," Larkin said. "If they're entertained, they'll come back, it's as simple as that. The committee are working very hard to ensure everything goes smoothly on the day, so we've got to turn up and deliver."

Tunbridge Wells have reached this stage of the competition on five previous occasions, but the last time was 19 years ago when they were knocked out by Hoddesdon Town.

St Ives, from Cambridgeshire, are fourth in the United Counties League after a 3-1 win at Blackstones on Saturday, their 500th game under managerial duo Jez Hall and Warren Everdell.

The Saints' previous best performances in the competition came when they reached fifth round replays in 2008 and 2009.

Their most familiar name is veteran striker Junior McDougald, who made more than 200 appearances for Brighton & Hove Albion, Rotherham and Dagenham & Redbridge and also appeared in the football soap opera Dream Team.

"They're a big, physical side who score a lot of goals from free-kicks and corners," Larkin said. "They've got five players who are six foot plus so we've got to look at how we deal with that. If we can stand up to that and play our football we've got an excellent chance."

Although Larkin initially planned to field a full-strength side against Sevenoaks Town in the Kent Senior Trophy, niggling injuries meant Jon Pilbeam, Andy Irvine and Gary Clarke all sat out the 3-2 defeat.

Larkin is hopeful all three will be fit for St. Ives, after a slightly weakened Wells side conceded twice in the dying minutes.

RUGBY UNION

Calm before the storm as critical games loom for Wells

AFTER a fourth consecutive defeat on Saturday increased the pressure on Tunbridge Wells, chairman Roger Clarke said it would be "criminal" if the club were relegated for a second successive season.

The Wells have a week off to recover from their 15-0 loss to Charlton Park at St. Mark's, ahead of a crucial run of games against direct rivals for relegation from London 2 South East.

"The coaching staff and myself as chairman will be judged at the end of the season," Clarke said. "To throw away league status for two years running would be criminal."

The survival battle was not helped when Tunbridge Wells conceded a soft try almost straight from the kick-off against a Charlton Park side chasing promotion.

Park kicked a penalty and made it 15-0 shortly before the break with a disputed try which the Wells claimed to have grounded first.

Three yellow cards further hindered their chances, but an improved second half display kept the home side in the hunt and they were unlucky late on when an

SURVIVAL FIGHT: Tunbridge Wells attempt to take a quick penalty was thwarted by the referee, who was issuing a yellow card to the visitors. "Charlton Park felt we deserved at least a bonus point, but that's the sort of luck you get when you're bottom of the league and playing a team at the top," Clarke said.

Landmark cricket week to go ahead as planned

PREPARATIONS for what is believed to be the 100th Tunbridge Wells cricket week are going ahead as usual despite reports before Christmas the annual festival was under threat.

Councillor Julian Stanyer, chairman of the budget working group at Tunbridge Wells Borough Council, had said the annual grant of £67,000 towards running costs should be reviewed to see if it was "value for money", raising fears one of Kent's last remaining out-grounds could lose its festival.

But the club's administrator Alan Cutts says they have been told the council have "no intention of pulling the plug" and are making all the usual arrangements at the Nevill.

"We are going full steam ahead with county week," he said. "And although it's not yet officially known as the centenary festival it is thought that this will be the 100th county week since the ground was inaugurated in 1898."

The precise figure remains open to debate. Cutts believes Kent have visited the ground on 103 separate occasions, but up to three of these were arguably not full weeks, including the first county fixture on the ground in July 1901, when Kent beat Lancashire by 67 runs in a three-day game.

HISTORIC: Cricket at the Nevill

The first official cricket week was in 1902, when Hampshire were thrashed inside two days by an innings and 195 runs, before Sussex, who became Kent's traditional rivals on the ground, won the first ever derby at the Nevill by one wicket, after a thrilling finish.

Since then the only interruptions have been for world wars.

NON-LEAGUE FOOTBALL FOCUS WITH FRED ATKINS

Worrying trend of play-acting

A DECADE ago the average footballer thought that waving an imaginary card was an even worse idea than introducing his partner to John Terry, but the game, it is claimed, is in a constant state of evolution.

It doesn't take long for the behavioural patterns of Premier League stars to be replicated at various points down the food chain and there's been a decided shift in tone in the Ryman League this season.

In the top flight a minority of figures are now acting almost like professional lobbyists, who regard the truth as a side issue in the pursuit of their interests.

Ten years ago, at non-league level, this didn't go much beyond yelling "our ball" even if it was obvious to the player involved he'd got the final touch. This was cheating but it seems fairly quaint now.

In Kent, as everywhere else, some clubs took it further, showing officials sustained belligerence for 90 minutes and accusing them of bias every time a decision went against them. These teams also habitually deployed "the reducer", a tackle designed to eliminate an opponent by injuring him.

Some did this deliberately. Others regarded it as a mutually agreed activity between consenting adults.

A Kent League manager once told me they'd nicknamed a rival player "the squealer" because he'd yelp every time a challenge went in, violating the unwritten law that you didn't complain, even if someone took a chainsaw to your knee.

That era appears to be over now that new guidelines on tackling "with excessive force" have been introduced.

The Guardian's "Secret Footballer" last week cited English football's obsession with getting stuck in as a reason for the repeated failure of the national team in major tournaments, quoting the former Liverpool midfielder Xabi Alonso "tackling is a last resort and you will need it, but it isn't a quality to aspire to, a definition".

However, the concept of staying on your feet and intercepting, as opposed to lunging in and not worrying if you smash your opponent in the process, is one that might take a while to sink in lower down.

A secondary issue is as the laws evolve, so do the methods used to break them.

Acting is now the weapon of choice for the casual cheat. Player reaction used to be a fairly reliable indicator of a refereeing decision's merits, but this season I've witnessed several Ryman League matches in which players have used false outrage to persuade a referee to send an opponent off, or feigned head injuries to force referees to halt opposition attacks.

With every season that goes by my sympathy for officials who have to deal with simulation and "ungentlemanly conduct" increases.

When a government minister has to deal with nefarious lobbyists he might at least get a trip to Dubai and a Rolex for his trouble. Referees just get phlegm in the ear.
